WORLD BEER
CHAMPIONSHIPS
2003

TOO BAD NY BARS HAVEN'T BANNED FLAVORLESS BEER.

In 2003, the judges from the World Beer Championships conducted a special taste test of the leading domestic and imported light beers. In 10 years of judging, Sam Adams Light® is the only light beer to be awarded a gold medal.

SAM ADAMS LIGHT. THE BEST TASTING LIGHT BEER IN THE WORLD.

The World Beer Championships, founded in 1994, is an independent body whose mission is to produce fair and impartial judging and reviews of beer for consumers. The World Beer Championships, conducted by the Beverage Testing Institute, have tested beer from over 50 countries.

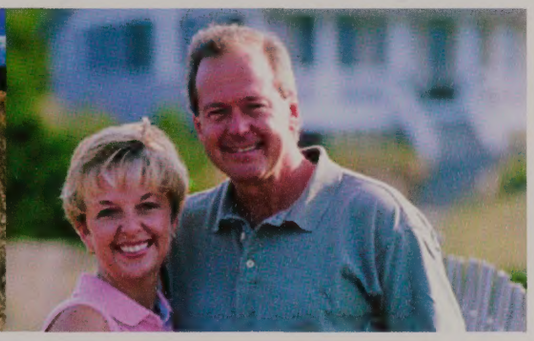
Up to $4,500,000 in hard cash. Without the hard questions.



Million dollar loan closes in 9 days.

A president of a Manhattan based commercial realty company, was looking for a $1 million mortgage with $350k cash out. Equity Now approved the loan over the phone and closed in 9 days, with no income verification.

"With Equity Now there were no hassles and no delays. They've earned my future business."
David R., Bedford, NY.

Hampton's restaurant owner gets financing.

A successful restaurant owner needed an $800,000 no income check loan, with $420K cash out to expand his business. He applied with 7 banks over a four month period. The banks wouldn't approve his loan. Equity Now approved his loan in hours and closed in 5 days.

"Next time I'll call Equity Now first."
John M., East Hampton, NY.

$750,000 cash out, with no income verification.

A 54 year old self employed investment banker needed money quickly for a lucrative business opportunity. Equity Now approved a $1.6 million mortgage, with $750k cash out.

"Equity Now was professional and fast. They delivered exactly what they promised."
Michael W., Cape Cod, MA.

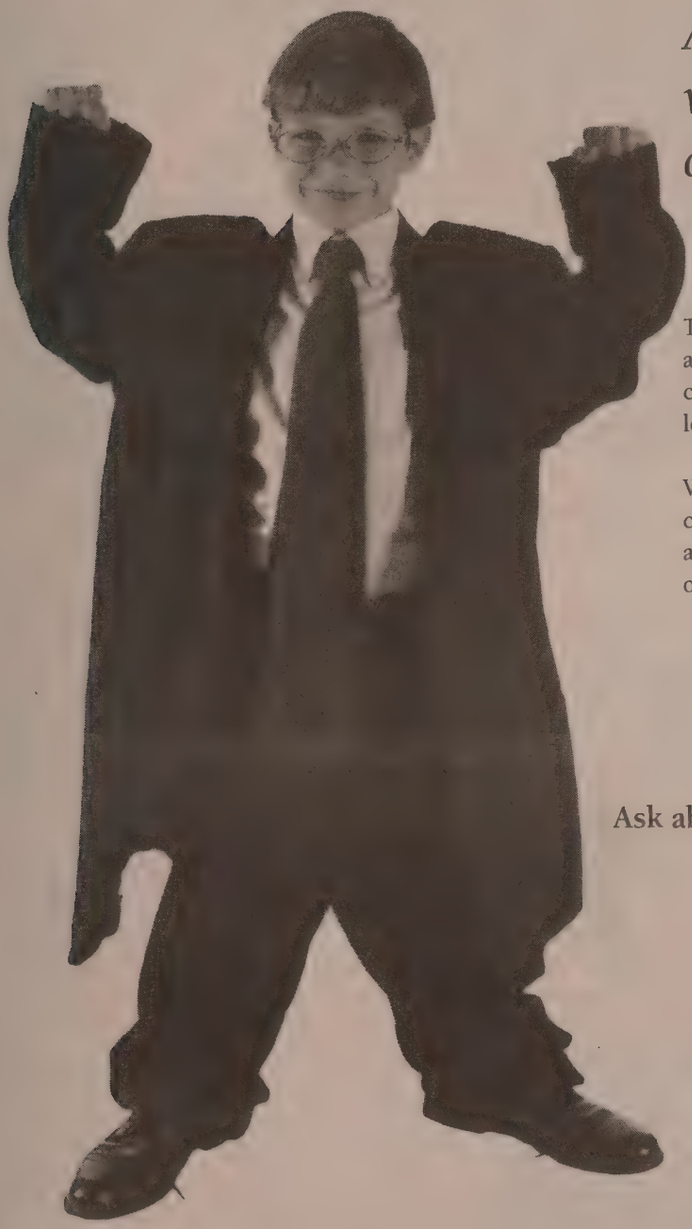
Looking for a mortgage to suit your needs?



At The New York Mortgage Company, we deliver personalized service with one person in mind . . . You.

These days, it seems that most mortgage lenders are simply not willing to tailor a loan specifically for borrowers with unique needs. As a direct lender, NYMC can be as versatile as you need us to be, providing hundreds of highly flexible loan products and innovative programs designed to accommodate your needs.

What's more, we make the entire loan process easier, quicker and more convenient by eliminating the red tape and bureaucratic obstacles that are often associated with borrowing from a large bank. Among the many different kinds of loans you can choose from at NYMC are:

- Interest Only Loans
- Jumbo Loans
- Bridge Loans
- Construction Loans
- Refinance Loans
- True No Doc Loans

and a wide range of others.

We also offer the best available rates, with fast approvals.

Ask about our LIBOR Interest Only loan at 2.75% rate, 2.92% APR

ARM APRs may increase after consummation. Offer subject to credit approval.
Advertised rates are prevailing and are subject to change without notice.

The Down Factory Store

www.downfactorystore.com

Summer Extravaganza

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

"We go the distance for you."

Governor of Arkansas Bill Clinton calls the balls and strikes at the Artist -Writers Softball Game in 1988. Pitching is super agent Sam Cohn.

Hail To The Chiefs

A Legion Of Presidents And First Ladies Have Visited The Hamptons

By Dan Rattiner

This article has been written in anticipation of this Saturday's Artists-Writers Softball Game in East Hampton. Read it and you'll see why.

Last week, Howard Dean was on the front cover of both Newsweek and Time magazine. He is now the clear front runner for the Democratic Presidential Nomination. He's an East Hampton boy.

Dean is not the first President or presidential candidate who has either come from or visited the East End. There are about a dozen of them. And they include Presidents Tyler, Roosevelt, McKinley, Nixon and Clinton.

President John Tyler, while in office, married an eighteen-year-old East Hampton girl. Her name was Julia Gardiner, her family had their home on the Main Street of East Hampton and she was the first woman, and in fact the only woman, ever married to a sitting President. They married in the White House.

Their courtship is a fascinating story. John Tyler was a prosperous cotton plantation owner from Virginia who was a friend of William Henry Harrison, the owner of another plantation down the road. Both men had inherited the plantations from their parents. In a bitter fight, Harrison became his party's nominee for President in 1840 and in the election that followed, defeated his opponent to become

Presidential candidate Howard Dean

President-elect. He had chosen, as his running mate, John Tyler and this became important because in January, outdoors on a bitter cold day in front of the Capitol Building, William Harrison placed his hand on a bible, swore to Defend the Constitution, and was sworn in. He was 65, a former Indian fighter (his campaign slogan was Tippecanoe and Tyler too), and to show just how robust he was, he then proceeded to take off his overcoat and launch into a rousing campaign speech that lasted more than a half hour. When it ended, he began running a fever, was diagnosed with pneumonia, was taken to a hospital and died two days later. It remains today the shortest run of any Presidency in American history. John Tyler was now President.

One year and six months later, on a calm July day, President Tyler was on the maiden voyage of a proud new American warship, the USS Princeton. The ship, the newest thing in the Navy, was the pride and joy of the Secretary of War, who had invited not only President Tyler but his entire cabinet on board for a cruise and party. They were sailing slowly down the Potomac when the Secretary of War asked the President if he'd like the big gun fired to show him how it worked and when Tyler said yes, the War Secretary ordered for that to happen. People gathered around, and soon, the gun was fired — prematurely — re-

In addition to his Lifetime Achievement Award presented by Dan Rattiner last Friday in Southampton, singer Jimmy Cliff has received the prestigious Jamaican Order of Merit.

Vera Wang of Southampton will design the wedding gown for Jennifer Lopez for her upcoming marriage to Ben Affleck. Ms. Lopez has also consulted with the designer on the groom's attire.

While Sharon Bush is here in the Hamptons looking for a house, her family is enjoying the red carpet treatment all over. Sharon and her photogenic daughters Lauren and Ashlely and son Pierce, are treated to free meals at hot eateries like Bamboo, and gratis accommodations at great spots like the Bentley Hotel. The family has been to movie premieres, polo, private parites and numerous galas.

Bridgehampton's Julie Andrews directed The Boyfriend at Bay Street Theatre in Sag Harbor, where her daughter, Emma Walton, is the co-artistic director. Ms. Andrews launched her career on Broadway in the musical comedy set in the Roaring 20's in 1954 at age eighteen.

Notables in The Boyfriend audience included Nathan Lane, who has announced his return, along with Matthew Broderick of Bridgehampton, to The Producers on Broadway, for a run to start on New Year's Eve.

Producer and actor Andre Harrell is a guest of Russell Simmons in East Hampton, while Kimora Lee Simmons readies the home for MTV's hip-hop lifestyle show Cribs with some extraordinary decorative purchases.

20/20's Barbara Walters and fashion designer Betsey Johnson were introduced by Jean-Luc Kleefield last week at his East Hampton Restaurant, Jean-Luc East.

The View's Star Jones of Wainscott launched her new shoe line, Starlet, last week. Starlet is the TV co-host's given name, since her mother observed how her eyes sparkled when she was born.

Ms. Jones is also busy with her new cable TV show, "The Party Planner," celebrating the launch with Marty Richards and Kim Cattrall among the guests at her home. Out came a new Payless Shoes endorsement, a Star Jones shoebox with her image on the cover.

With a release party hosted by Marty Richards, Hilary Swank and Chad Lowe at the Water Mill home of Marcy and Michael Warren, Karin Yapalater, author of soon to be released An Hour To Kill, will host a Brunch/Reading at a book signing at BookHampton in East Hampton on August 15.

■ Ten million dollars' worth of inventory hints at the "mind-boggling" number of labels at this "upscale" East Side "institution" that's rated the Survey's No. 1 Wine Shop thanks to its "deepest selection" of "hard-to-find" bottles, including old Bordeaux and Burgundies; a "suave, informed" staff, "catalogs that are works of art" and a sophisticated, "civilized" atmosphere fuel its "great snob appeal",though truthfully there are plenty of inexpensive options too.

FROM CORTE GIARA:

Three Superb Italian Wine Discoveries

These superb Italian wines were discovered by Sherry-Lehmann's Michael Yurch during his annual visit to VinItaly. He was delighted by the outstanding craftsmanship and the true varietal character that these wines displayed and they now have become Sherry-Lehmann's Best Selling Italian wines. At $8.95 a bottle they represent amazing value in Italian excellence.

CORTE GIARA CHARDONNAY 2001

Bright, soft, buttery fruit with aristocratic hints of butterscotch, melon and pineapple give this modest Chardonnay exceptional flavor. Look for lingering flavors and good acidity. (4303)

CORTE GIARA PINOT GRIGIO 2001

WITNESS THE MAGIC

My name is Stan Zeitchick , and I was born in Brooklyn, in 1935. I lived on Long Island for a good part of my life and then moved to Florida, ten years ago. It was in Florida that I became involved with Horses and the Handicapped, and it was then I witnessed the magic. You see, I have been honored and privileged to sit on the board of this wonderful organization that takes severely physically challenged children and puts them on top of a horse. We do hippotherapy, a kind of physical therapy that involves the movement of the horse, a licensed physical therapist and a special indescribable something that produces results which are both documented and amazing.

We are at a crossroads now. Our small organization has been able to service seventy children; but, there are literally hundreds on the waiting list. Their physicians request that they do hippotherapy; but, alas, the cost of supporting the horses and barn has made it impossible for us to expand.

We are looking for that special someone, who is in a position to help us, help all those kids who need us so desperately. If you could leave a legacy of love, via a therapeutic riding facility, that would be established in your name, contact me at 631-287-1133. or 888-5 HELP-US (888-543-5787) and you too will be part of our "Magic."

GEORGE SAYS, "THERE ARE SOME THINGS WE GOTTA STRAIGHTEN OUT."

As usual there are too many rumors floating around.

Kazdin Pools & Spas didn't even exist in 1929.

We never were a Speakeasy.

No one never delivered bootleg hooch to us.

George may captain his own boat, but that doesn't mean he was a rum runner.

Elliot Ness never sat in, or did anything else in our hot tub.

And to the best of George's knowlege, no one ever made bathtub gin in one of our pools.

As a matter of fact, in 1929, none of us were born yet.

The confusion must have started because Kazdin Pools & Spas opened its doors over 30 years ago.

Not in 1929.

In these past years, we've met thousands of people who've entrusted us to design, build and maintain their pools and spas.

When we won awards for design and service, they cheered us.

So, one of the first things we want to do this year, is very humbly thank all of you for your trust and loyalty.

sulting in a tremendous explosion as the shell blew up inside the breech in a disastrous explosion. The ship momentarily caught fire and shrapnel was sent flying everywhere. Now there were wounded and dead everywhere.

Among the wounded, who was promptly carried down into a cabin, was New York State Senator, David Gardiner of East Hampton, who was on board for the entertainment with his beautiful seventeen-year-old daughter Julia. Julia followed the people carrying her father into the cabin, held his hand, and as he slowly died, began to cry. Behind her, there was a former Virginia planter, the 51-year-old President, to comfort her. He put his hand on her shoulder. And after that they were never seen again without being in the company of the other. John and Julia Tyler were a classic American love story.

Tyler visited the family home in East Hampton at one point. There is no record of how long he was there or what they did. Tyler served out the term, approving, among other things, the annexation of Texas. He then declined to run again.

In the summer of 1898, Teddy Roosevelt, a Captain in the Army, landed with his Roughriders aboard a troop ship in Fort Pond Bay, Montauk. He and his men, along with 32,000 other soldiers in the American army, had just vanquished the Spanish in the first overseas military campaign conducted by this country. It had ranged from the Philippines to Cuba and everywhere the fighting took place the Americans were victorious. Roosevelt had led a charge up San Juan Hill in Cuba. His commanding officer, General Shaftner, led surrender negotiations in Santiago. With the peace signed — the Spanish lost everything — all the soldiers boarded troop ships for the voyage to the dock in Fort Pond Bay, Montauk. Many of them, upon coming down the gangplank, kissed the ground to celebrate their return.

Roosevelt was two years away from becoming President at that point, and he was about two week ahead of a sitting President, President William McKinley of Ohio, who was moved to come visit him and the rest of the victorious American army. There are photographs of the two of them sitting in a tent in a field in Montauk. After two months of rest, recuperation and maneuvers, the troops were mustered out. A year and a half later, McKinley choose Roosevelt as his running mate.

In 1901, President McKinley was assassinated at an Industrial Exposition and Worlds Fair in Buffalo, New York, and Teddy Roosevelt assumed the Presidency.

Roosevelt's time in Montauk in 1898 is well known. But not so well known was his time spent on the East End in 1911. He was out of office then, also back from several hunting expeditions to Africa, and he had traveled from Manhattan out Long Island to the East End in a motor car — one of the first of its kind — down dirt roads in the company of a well-known official of the Long Island Railroad. This official, Hal Fullerton, drove Roosevelt alongside the newly laid railroad track and then away from the tracks where some of the many farms, particularly new experimental farms in the Pine Barrens of Medford and Wading River along the way. They were gone on this adventure for about two weeks, setting up tent and camping somewhere in that wilderness every night.

Jackie Bouvier, who was to become the first lady of the land from 1960 until 1963, was born in Southampton Hospital and spent her summers as a little girl here in East Hampton. Her father was Joe "Blackjack" Bouvier, a wealthy New York businessman who had a summer home on the dunes. At the peak of his diplomatic career during the 1930s — he had become part of the Franklin D. Roosevelt administration — he was Ambassador to England. In that post, he was a pro-German and pro-Nazi sympathizer. At least that was the position he assumed and the advice he gave, not taken, to FDR.

There is a record that Jack Kennedy, with his two younger brothers, came out to the Hamptons while courting his future wife before he became President, but there is no record of his coming out here to visit his inlaws after he was elected. His Presidency was marked with great energy, excellent ideas and not enough time to put them into effect as he was assassinated by Lee Harvey Oswald in November of 1963. Much of what he proposed became law after he died. He was a President ahead of his time.

The man Kennedy defeated in the election of 1960 was a frequent visitor to Montauk. Richard M. Nixon, who was elected in his own right in 1968 and then re-elected in 1972, loved to vacation at Gurney's Inn in Montauk. He wrote his 1972 acceptance speech while vacationing at Gurney's. He was put up for impeachment in 1974 because of his role in the Watergate burglary and because of his apparent lying about it afterwards, but he resigned before an impeachment vote could take place.

For those who may have forgotten, the Watergate break in involved a secret midnight burglary into the offices of the Democratic Party Headquarters in Washington during the election campaign of 1972. Various wiretaps were secretly placed around the office and numerous documents were photographed. The burglars were caught by security police in the act, however, and it was found that they had been paid by Richard Nixon's Republican Administration so Nixon could anticipate his opponent's strategy.

Another player on the Presidential stage who was a frequent visitor to this place during that era was Eugene M. McCarthy, the Minnesota senator who ran in the primary against Lyndon Johnson, the sitting President in 1968. McCarthy never won a primary against Johnson, but on several occasions came so close that Johnson decided to abandon his plans to become re-elected. His Vietnam War policy had become a disaster. The country he led was in serious disarray and with the serious showing by McCarthy, he thought it would be best to withdraw, as disgraceful as that was. In his place, his Vice President Hubert Humphrey took up the Democratic banner, but he was swamped by Richard M. Nixon in the election. Nixon, as already noted, had his own problems.

McCarthy became a beloved figure after his primary run. He moved to New York where he became an editor at a publishing house. He will be recalled by some playing in the annual Artists-Writers Baseball game (that game this year is this Saturday in Herrick Park in downtown East Hampton at 3 p.m.) at first base where, over time, he developed a rip in the back of his pants.

In the summer of 1988, Governor Bill Clinton of Arkansas worked behind the mound of the Artist-Writers Softball Game calling balls and strikes for five innings. He was a young, Oxford educated 42-year-old at the time, and nobody in these parts ever heard of him, but he apparently was attracted to this game where well-known people played and umpired once a year and thought it would be fun to get involved.

Clinton was considered one of our smartest and well-meaning Presidents during his eight years in the White House, and if his policies seemed slightly to the left of center to some, he served the country well. The country prospered.

His personal life was another matter, however, and he had numerous dalliances with women not his wife, one of which, in the Oval Office itself, led to an impeachment attempt in 1999, on the grounds that he had lied to a Congressional committee about his behavior and was unfit for public office. The effort failed by a very small margin.

In 1998, after an affair with a White House intern was made public but before the impeachment attempt was made, Bill Clinton and his wife Hillary, still President and First Lady, made a trip to the Hamptons which was part fundraiser and part attempt to reconcile. They stayed at the home of Steven Spielberg and Kate Capshaw on Georgica Pond in East Hampton. Hillary Clinton had already announced her intention to run for Congress. Bill Clinton was a lame duck President trying mightily to keep the Middle East peace talks alive. There was no attending or playing in the Artists-Writers Baseball Game that summer. But a few days before their arrival, persons unknown "let" Georgica Pond so what was a body of water became a great puddle of mud. It was rumored that this job, which violated local ordinances, had been done by the Secret Service, in order to keep papparazzi or terrorists off the pond. The house where the Clintons were staying fronted on the pond.

President Clinton and his wife, now Congresswoman Hillary Clinton, have visited the Hamptons on several occasions since moving to Chappaqua up in Westchester County where they currently live. Hillary Clinton was here just two weeks ago to express her opinions about the proposed Shinnecock Gambling Casino and the Animal Disease Center on Plum Island.

In the summer of 1999, Vice President Al Gore and his wife Tipper visited the Hamptons to raise funds for his cliffhanger and unsuccessful Presidential campaign. I spent about twenty minutes with him after a luncheon at the American Hotel in Sag Harbor that July. I found him to be personable and smart, liberal in his ideas and easy going. I have often wondered since then, how, if he had been elected President, he would have handled events after 11 a.m. on September 11, 2001.

Killer Laptop

Judge Orders Lawyers To Produce Laptop Evidence In Ammon Murder

By Dan Rattiner

Nearly two years ago, someone went into the mansion of Wall Street financier Ted Ammon in East Hampton in the middle of the night and bludgeoned him to death in his bed. He was alone in the house at the time. His body was not discovered for more than a day. The murder has never been solved.

Now there is a development in the case which could lead to the unraveling of the mystery. A grand jury has asked two lawyers, men who represent the former Mrs. Ammon, what happened to the laptop computer that belonged to Mr. Ammon that was in the house. The lawyers say they had briefly come into the possession of the laptop, but they no longer had it. They cited "protected client-attorney privacy" as the reason they would not say what happened to it after they had it. But now a judge in Riverhead has ruled that they have to comply.

The laptop is important, the grand jury says, because it had software on it that could enable it to turn on and off the burglar alarm and video surveilance system in the house. When the body was found, the burglar alarm system was off. This seemed very odd since Ammon had told people he was very concerned that his wife might try to kill him, and that weekend he was alone in the dark in this very big house.

The history of this case, both leading up to the murder and since it happened, is so amazing they could never make a movie out of it. Nobody would believe it. For example, today, as you read this, the former Mrs. Ammon, now called Generosa Ammon Pelosi because of a remarriage, is actually living in this mansion today, alone except for her two children, attended by nurses and doctors. She is dying.

Ted Ammon was a bright, handsome, wealthy New Yorker in his early fifties who made his money as an investment banker. He married Generosa, the second marriage for him, her first, about fifteen years ago. Neither had any children.

The Ammons were part of the New York social scene. They attended charity events. Ted Ammon was the chairman of the board of directors of Jazz at Lincoln Center. They adopted twin children. They bought homes in Surrey, England, and East Hampton. They had a duplex penthouse apartment in New York City.

In the fourteenth year of their marriage, the Ammons decided to divorce. It was acrimonious. Ammon bought a smaller apartment on the Upper East Side and moved into it. Generosa also rented a second apartment because she had decided to proceed with a major renovation of the duplex. Among those working on the renovation was Daniel Pelosi, an electrician who lived with his wife and six children in a small house in Manorville, Long Island, which is a lower middle class community not too far from Riverhead. Generosa and Pelosi became a couple. They began to live openly together. As the divorce negotiations proceeded, they moved into the rented apartment with the young Ammon twins who were, at this point, ten years old.

To give you a good idea of the acrimonious nature of the relationship during this time, there is testimony that Generosa Ammon had told the children that the satellite dish atop the apart-

How Men Survive

Special Strategies By Y Chromosomes In A Sea Of X

By Dan Rattiner

Ever since scientists cracked the genetic code that makes up a human being, there have been interesting developments coming from various laboratories around the world. One of them, so far, has not been the discovery of a way to live forever, which a lot of people have been hoping for. On the other hand, last week, in Japan, there is a lab that has cloned the DNA from a woolly mammoth to see what happens. But that is not what this article is about.

This article is about the stuff that makes up the differences between men and women. And it comes out of the Whitehead Institute of Cambridge, Massachusetts, which has been studying these differences, apparently making one startling study after another.

The most recent one involves the X and Y chromosomes. As I am sure you know, women have two X chromosomes while men have one X chromosome and one Y chromosome. What you may not know is that over the centuries, the Y chromosome has slowly been degrading genetically and is almost entirely out of business. It's the X chromosome, stupid. When the Y chromosome finally disappears, which it just may someday, there won't be any more men. There will only be women.

This business of the Y chromosome degrading was documented almost immediately after the human genome chain was decoded. It had long been theorized. In genetic evolution, when you make a baby, an X chromosome from one person combines with an X chromosome of another person. Things that might be damaged in mutation from one person are usually corrected by the X chromosome of the other person. And so it goes.

As for the Y chromosome, it hangs around but it doesn't do much. It has male characteristics so when it is present, it makes males. But it doesn't combine. It is the X chromosome in the male that combines with the X chromosome in the female. The Y just gets handed down and down, and it slowly mutates into something less and less complicated. For example, we now know that the X chromosomes are made up of about 1,000 genes and at one point the Y chromosomes had a richness of 1,000 genes, too. Now, the Y chromosomes only have about 100 genes. And the downward trend continues. And so as a result women are complex and incomprehensible and men sit around drinking beer and watching TV. At least that is how I imagine it.

Many chromosomes that lack the ability to combine eventually go out of business... Which leads to the question... are men doomed?

Scientists have observed that over time many chromosomes that lack the ability to combine eventually go out of business. The phenomenon is called "Muller's Ratchet," probably after a man named Muller who discovered it, and in the end these chromosomes that don't combine lose their genetic content all together. They go out of business. Which leads to the question — forget living forever — are men doomed?

By the way, I am not making this up. This is all from an article that appeared in the Science section of The New York Times on June 19. Nicholas Wade, the author, refers to what is happening to these non-combining chromosomes as "the grim process of irreversible genetic decay." Life on earth would be a lot less interesting without us hunks walking around, believe you me and believe Nicholas Wade, but there it is. We're in deep trouble.

And so it has been that man — I refer to the REAL word "man" not the all-encompassing word MAN that is short for mankind — has gotten interested to see where this is going with about as much curiosity as other men (now meant the other way) are pioneering efforts to figure out how to stop aging and help everybody live forever.

And now they have got the answer! Or part of the answer. At the Whitehead Institute last week, Director Dr. David C. Page, led a team into the deepest, darkest recesses of microbiology and discovered A PALINDROME in the Y chromosome. You know what a palindrome is. It is something that reads the same backwards as forward. Like "Madam, I'm Adam." Try it. And note how appropriate this particular palindrome is to this article.

Chromosomes, as you may know, are found in pairs. They line up alongside one another. XX and XY. Spoon-fashion. Like two people in a bed. And with this spooning, the various tiny genes go through the walls of the chromosomes and meet up with each other and recombine. (This sounds so neat.) And that's how genetic changes and combinations come about, at least as long as both parties are Xs. As I mentioned earlier, Xs do not combine with Ys.

The palindrome they have just found, by the way, is not just semantics, although on one level it is. Scientists have now given names to all the genes in the human genome so that we can identify them, and it is these names which have been found, midway through the Y gene, lining up backwards but identical to the way they line up in another Y gene. In other words, a pulse of recombining energy, running down two Y genes lying spoon-fashion side by side, comes to this place where one of the Y genes has a reverse order to the other. The energy makes a U-turn. And apparently, running back the way it came, it has figured out a way to get the Y gene to transfer material to the other Y gene.

I should point out that this is a particularly useless activity, considering that it all goes on within one human male. Nothing comes of it, genetically speaking, as far as a man combining stuff with a woman is concerned.

Also, the speed with which this Y gene transfer happens is much slower than the XX transfer and also far less frequent. So the net result is that the slow degeneration of the number of genes within the Y chromosome is slowed, but not stopped. It's a reprieve. Or maybe the slowing actually turns into stopping after awhile. They haven't worked far enough along to determine that yet.

I know what you are thinking. This, in some way, is natures justification for homosexuality. Well, I don't know. They haven't worked far enough along to determine that yet, either. They just know that apparently, so far, the Y chromosome has been able to avoid Muller's Ratchet.

I did want to write a bit about the combining of the woolly mammoth genetic material in Japan at the Kinki University in western Japan — the woolly mammoth material has been chipped from the frozen remains of several mammoths found in the ice in Siberia last August — but we're out of time.

I'm going out now to rent The Andromeda Strain. •

Ivy Ong, The Riverhead Economic Zone, A Casino And Odds

By Dan Rattiner

About ten years ago, a book came out about a man who does a good deed for a billionaire without knowing he has all that money. The billionaire, touched, meets the man and his family and offers the man, his wife and two children their hearts desire. One of the children goes off to London to medical school. The man's wife becomes an actress in Hollywood. The man takes an extended one year trip around the world. And the whole family unit crumbles.

I was thinking of the plot of this book the other day when I saw, again, an air view of what the Shinnecock Indians had done to their own land in Hampton Bays. A beautiful 84 acre plot of pristine woods on Peconic Bay, they had, in a frenzy to start building their proposed gambling casino during a loophole in a legal proceeding, brought in a bulldozer and cleared six acres of this beautiful land, tearing down trees, ripping up grass and flowers and leaving the property a scarred patch on the earth, thus ruining it for decades to come. This was land, sacred land they said, that had not been disturbed for thousands of years.

They were doing just what the white man, elsewhere, was doing.

The connection to the book involves money, lots of it, and what people will do if given it. Turns out one group of people is no better or worse than anybody else in this regard.

The cause of all of this is a very rich investor from New Mexico named Ivy Ong. And the good turn that the Shinnecocks have done is be a native American tribe of Indians eligible to have a casino. According to documents obtained by the Southampton Press, Ong has agreed to provide $10 million to finance the creation of the proposed casino. He has done it before, successfully, with other native American tribal casinos. In essence, in the case of the Shinnecocks, he has agreed to take the gamble with the casino, roll the dice so to speak, to bring to the Shinnecocks more money than they could imagine in their wildest dreams — a projected $80 million a year. That Ong might get a good percentage of this — perhaps $20 million a year — is the upside of the gamble. The downside is that the casino never gets approved. Ong's ten million dollars could all go down the drain if the project foundered. Thus, as they say, is what America is all about.

The Shinnecocks were offered this arrangement, they debated it — some said it was signing with the devil and some said it was the best thing that could ever happen to them — and in the end they discussed it in a big tribal council meeting. And they voted. And then, four months ago, they signed. Over these past four months, just concluded, Ong has spent a reported six million dollars in cash on this project. About two and a half million has been put aside for the legal effort on behalf of the tribe. And about a million has been given to the tribe itself directly to improve their Southampton reservation and make it a better place to live — something that it sorely needs. The fact is that the sole source of income for the tribe, the sole sizeable source, anyway, is their annual Labor Day Weekend Indian Powwow. And last Labor Day it was rained out. They actually lost money.

The Shinnecock Nation, and there are about 500 of them living in reduced circumstances on their reservation in Shinnecock — about six miles from the proposed casino site — have been an abused people, abused by the white men since the white men landed here three hundred and fifty years ago. Told by the white men way back then that according to the white men's rules the Indians were a Separate Nation, they were deprived of any ability to have social programs, health care, proper schooling, child care, and more recently federal student or building loan programs or any other sorts of things that everyone around them got. That this was left to go on this long is a disgrace and a disservice to them.

In recent weeks, various American officials — Town and County Supervisors, State Legislators, Congressmen and Senators — have either met with the Shinnecock Tribal Leaders or have corresponded with them. They all want the Shinnecocks NOT to build the casino, or at least not build it in Hampton Bays. They have expressed astonishment that various things they have offered in exchange for the Shinnecocks NOT doing this — promises of a piece of the profit of a new casino in the Catskills, promises of funds from other activities — have been met only with lukewarm responses. They have forgotten that NOBODY writes six million dollars worth of checks for a new investment opportunity without other people signing on the dotted line. And you may be sure that what is not in there is some section of the contract that says the Shinnecocks, after making the commitment, can just walk away from it without owing Ong all sorts of penalties on top of his six million dollars. In other words, the deal is done. The Shinnecocks are going to go forward to get a casino in partnership with Ong. And they are proposing it in Hampton Bays.

I do not think the Hampton Bays part of this is locked in stone. I think having a casino somewhere on eastern Long Island is locked in stone since the Ong investment probably determined that given the market and the absence of a casino here, the eastern end of Long Island is definitely a good place to make a go of it.

On the other hand, the Indian-owned land in Hampton Bays, separate from their reservation, is certainly not the best place to put one. It is in the middle of a populated area. It is in an area already established with its own and highly respected personality. It is in an area that is financially thriving. It is in an area that is very difficult, from a transportation perspective, to get to. And it does not deserve the kinds of social problems and ethical and questionable moral activities that a casino is very likely to bring.

Casinos seem to thrive in unpopulated areas, areas with strong transportation assets, areas that are financially distressed and in need of a boost, and areas that have not yet clearly formed ethical and moral standards in the community —largely because there is no community yet.

Such an area does exist on eastern Long Island with all these attributes, and that is the vast undeveloped area known as the Pine Barrens. The Town of Riverhead, which is the largest town adjacent to the Pine Barrens, has been trying for years to develop it. Projections for the proposed casino are that it might bring 3.5 million people a year to the area. Just outside of Riverhead, there is the ten year old Tanger Mall. I talked recently to Steve Tanger about it and about the 3.5 million that might come to a casino. He said over 15 million a year come to Tanger.

Betting On Terror

Wager On Saddam, WMD, Osama, Courtesy Of The Dept. Of Defense

By Jerry Cimisi

There's nothing stranger than the real news.

Wanna bet that weapons of mass destruction will be found in Iraq by December? That Osama bin Laden will finally be captured? That Yasir Arafat will be assassinated? How about whether North Korea will deploy its nukes? Or that Hamas will join the Middle East peace process?

All these possible "futures" and more would have been open to bettors if a special program proposed by a unique agency within the Department of Defense had come to pass. But Future Markets Applied to Prediction (or FutureMAP) saw enough of the light of day to horrify politicians and the public alike and the resulting disapproval stopped it before it began.

A little background: Heard of DARPA? No, not something out of Star Wars. How about John Poindexter? No, not that pseudonymous singer of certain '80s Hamptons' nightspots whose fake first name was Buster. DARPA is the Defense Advanced Research Project Agency within the DOD. DARPA, in fact, brought us the Internet. Seriously. (Don't tell me you still thought it was Mr. Gore.) And John Poindexter is none other than Ronald Reagan's former National Security Adviser, who was the highest official to be convicted in the Iran-Contra scandal. Poindexter said he had shielded President Reagan from all knowledge of what was going on. Poindexter's conviction was subsequently overturned on some technicality about immunity. He went to work for DARPA as a civilian after 9/11 — and immediately raised howls with his plan to tap into computer databases in order to get more personal information on just about everyone.

> It conjures up the possibility that a terrorist can place a bet on an event he — or she — can actually bring about. The ultimate insider trading.

Anyway, at DARPA, Poindexter oversees PAM — Policy Analysis Market. It would begin with a select group of 100 bettors who would wager about tumultuous events, mostly in the middle east, but also include the possibility of terrorist events at home as well as North Korea and its nukes. The pool would be expanded to 10,000 bettors by next year. The Pentagon set funding of $8 million for the project through 2005.

Supposedly the idea behind this was that if these select bettors (whose pool would constantly increase) began to predict a higher risk of a terrorist event, the government would take heed. It is a fact that betting pools are better at predicting such things as election results, etc. than the so-called "experts." Though the DOD was to begin this pool with so-called experts. This leads one to believe that the DOD would know who is placing the bets, yet at the same time DARPA suggested that the identity of the bettors be kept private. Then again, if someone bets that there is an 80 percent chance of a terrorist event while the "market" puts it, at say, 20 percent, and such an event occurs, don't you think the feds are going to be knocking at that person's door?

But the worst flaw in all this has been pointed out by many people. It conjures up the possibility that a terrorist can place a bet on an event he — or she — can actually bring about. The ultimate insider trading. Take just one more step and make that an easy way to fund terrorism.

The proposal wasn't received well in Congress. Senate Minority leader Tom Daschle (perhaps thinking there might be wagers on him getting an anthrax letter) was quoted saying Senator Pat Roberts (R-Kansas) of the Senate Intelligence Committee and Senator Ted Stevens (R-Alaska) Chair of the Appropriations Committee, agreed with him (Daschle) that PAM "should be mutually disestablished." A loud No, if awkwardly phrased.

Even Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Wolfowitz (affectionately — or bitterly — known as "Wolfie" — said, "We'll find out about it, but it's being terminated." Yogi Berra could not have put it more succinctly. In other words, we didn't know it was happening, but since it's come to light and obviously ridiculous, we'll do something about it.

Jan Walker, a spokeswoman for DARPA, could give no information on PAM "other than what's already out there." She said she did not know anything about its genesis.

When queried as to whether or not Congress had knowledge that this was in the budget, she could only answer that Congress did indeed have to pass the budget for the Department of the Defense every year. Whether each and every item the DOD and DARPA would apply money too was specifically outlined, she could not say. "Ask your congressman and senators about it."

The government had not planned to go at this alone. A San Diego company called NetExchange was going to help. The bets would have been transacted on an internet site. Bettors needed only a credit card. ("For everything else, there's Mastercard...")

In answer to the above worry about a bettor having knowledge of or actually initiating an event he or she bets on, there was the response by proponents of the project that such occurrences would send a signal to our intelligence gatherers (whose perspicacity has perhaps improved somewhat since 9/11) to be on the alert.

At any rate, like a lot of dotcom ideas that folded, the Policy Analysis Market was stopped before it got off the ground — and, in fact, Mr. Poindexter has tended his resignation over the furor. One has the feeling he's thinking: No one appreciates me...

Though before he did, you could have bet on his leaving or not, as well as a lot of the things mentioned above, on an Irish internet site — tradepsorts.com — that handles everything from rugby to American baseball and the Superbowl, to terrorist alerts to whether Hillary will get the presidential nomination.

Tradesports.com. both proposes contracts to the public — no need to be in with the DOD — and accepts contracts from bettors. From early in the year it had a contract out on the viability of Saddam Hussein's rule. In March, bettors predicted there would be a 30 percent chance Saddam would be gone by the end of the month and an 86 percent chance he would be gone by the end of June.

As for finding the infamous — and elusive — WMD, Weapons of Mass Destruction, by the end of September, tradesports.com bettors put that at about an 80 percent possibility in March, but by the first of August that had sunk to only 27 percent.

The Super Bowl heads the most frequent wager on tradesports.com — the Buccaneers are favored. You can bet if the Dow will close under 7,000 at the end of the year — or above 10,000. There is more action on the above bet. The Yankees are favored to win the World Series. The Cubs are favored to take the National League Central Division. Bet on Hillary, Dubya, Ah-nold (as the tabloids like to say) and Osama. I'd like to bet that pretty soon there is going to be a pro-wrestler called WMD.

I'd also wager that the Pentagon's idea will find, in this wonderful free market system an American outlet for such current international considerations. Wouldn't it increase the patriotic pride of Americans who buy Lotto with addictive regularity to bet on the demise of Saddam and whoever else is the enemy of the moment? Forget about rights to those playing cards of the Iraqi elite.

"Two bucks they'll find bin Laden in Pakistan by November."

"Three on Arafat getting whacked."

"Gimme a dollar on Hillary, a dollar against Hillary."

And I wouldn't be surprised if there's a wager on an amendment to let Arnold be president, even if he is foreign-born. (Henry Kissenger, you were before your time.) Maybe we should have sent the Terminator into Baghdad.

Who's Here

Stewart Lane

Broadway Producer

By Dan Rattiner

Stewart Lane is one of the most successful producers of Broadway shows in America today. His productions over the last twenty years have included "La Cage Aux Folles," "Gypsy," "Thoroughly Modern Millie" and the "Will Rogers Follies." The recipient of seven Tony nominations, he has won three. But now, sitting at the dining room table of the grand house he lives in in the Northwest section of East Hampton during the summer, what he wants to talk about is one of his, as he puts it, "less successful" ventures.

"My name is on the wall at Joe Allen's Restaurant along with Hal Prince and David Merrick. The first time I saw it I was so proud. Me, Hal Prince and David Merrick. All on Joe's Wall of Failure."

"What are you talking about?" I asked.

"It's a tradition. You have a huge flop, your name goes up on the restaurant wall. Forever. For me it was the show 'Frankenstein.' John Carradine starred in it. It lasted one night. Two million dollars gone just like that."

Stewart Lane was born and raised on Long Island, first in Rockville Center, and then when he was seven years old, in Great Neck. His father, Lenny, was in the "Earn a High School Diploma at Home" mail order business and was very prosperous.

One day, when Lane was about eleven, his best friend invited him to go with him to a Broadway show.

"I knew his dad was an actor. That was about it. Now he was in a Broadway show so we should go see him. We went to the theater and we had two tickets in the front row. The lights went down, the footlights came up. I was dazzled. I couldn't believe it. After the show, we went backstage to visit with his dad in his dressing room. It was like a little house there in that dressing room. A bed, a refrigerator, a hot plate, a TV. His dad was Sid Caesar, and the show, which he starred in, was 'Little Me' by Neil Simon with a score by Cy Coleman. From that day on all I wanted to do was be in the theater."

Lane went to Great Neck North High School and joined the drama class. He already had theater experience. When he was in the eighth grade, he played a cab driver in a Great Neck production of Harvey. He was on for the last five minutes. He continued to go into Manhattan, by train, for Saturday matinees. In addition to falling in love with Broadway, he fell in love with the city.

He studied acting at Boston University and in the summers went off on the summer stock circuit. He performed with Van Johnson in "Send Me No Flowers." He appeared with Peter Palmer ("Lil' Abner") in "Oklahoma." He got his equity card at a theater in Sullivan Illinois.

"I did modeling, acting and writing. I joined Aftra, Equity and SAG. I thought — this is a blast. You do what you like, you travel and you get paid for it. And I loved working with people in the theater. Ideas bounce back and forth. It's very collaborative."

Lane graduated BU in 1973 (he recently received a distinguished alumni award there), and went to Los Angeles.

"I hated it," he said. "The whole atmosphere is different. In New York, if you're up for a part and you don't get it, all your friends call you and console you. In Los Angeles, if you don't get the part, nobody will talk to you. You're a pariah."

Unsure of how he could extricate himself from Los Angeles, he called a friend of his fathers, Jimmy Nederlander, who owned theaters on Broadway. He needed a job, he told Jimmy. Is there anything you have available? Come to New York and you can work at the Brooks Atkinson Theater, Nederlander said. They need an assistant house manager there. Lane went and for awhile worked at the theater. This was during the run of Bernard Slade's play "Same Time Next Year." After awhile, Nederlander invited Lane to come with him and sit in on negotiations as Nederlander's assistant. And thus Lane was introduced to producing, and how the mechanics of creating a show work. Among other things, he dealt with unions and payroll.

During this time, Lane wrote his first play, a show entitled "In the Wings," about the making of a play and the big egos involved in doing so. He and a girlfriend performed in it, holding a reading in a theater on Broadway. It got good reviews.

Lane had another conversation with Nederlander. I want to do more, Lane said. Invest in one of my shows, even a small amount, and you'll see the whole shebang, Nederlander told him.

In 1979, at the age of 28, Stewart Lane, with a small investment, became an assistant producer on the Broadway show "Who's Life is it Anyway?" The same year, Lane's name appeared on the marquee "above the title" for the first time, as he put it, in Jerry Herman's "Grand Tour," starring Joel Grey.

After that he hit bottom, and within six months hit the top. It is strange how Broadway can be such a roller coaster ride.

"It was 1981," Lane said. "The city was going through a hard time. Broadway was suffering terribly. I produced 'Frankenstein.' Thud. And then I produced 'Woman of the Year' starring Lauren Bacall. It was a hit. Bacall won a Tony for here performance. John Kander received a nomination for Best Score. And I got my first Tony nomination as a producer."

After this, through the 1980s, came "La Cage Aux Folles." and during the next decade "Can-Can," "Tanzi," "Wait Until Dark," "Minelli on Minelli," "1776," and "Annie." In 2000 he was nominated for a Tony for "Gypsy," and in that same year co- wrote a comedy "If It Was Easy..." which was nominated for the American Theater Critic's Association's New Play Award. He has worked with Martin Short, Marvin Hamlisch, Marisa Tomei, Racquel Welsh, Diane Wiest, Debby Harry, also Liza Minnelli, Lauren Bacall, Joel Grey and Marla Maples in "The Will Rogers Follies."

"We worked her really hard," Lane said of Maples, who at the time was the wife of Donald Trump. "And she got very good."

Lane is currently working, at his home here in East Hampton, on a screenplay for "If It Was Easy..." He is in residence here all summer long, with approximately once a week forays into New York.

"With the fax, cell phone, UPS, conference calls and the internet, you can really do this," he said.

During our interview, Lane's wife Bonnie Comley arrived from picking up their daughter Leah from horseback riding. Lane introduced me. This was their third of three daughters, Eliana and Harlyn. They went off to make lunch.

"I make daughters," Lane said.

"Bonnie is co-producing 'Ragtime' with me in London," he said, "and she is co-producing 'Gypsy' with me on Broadway." Indeed she had just received her first Tony nomination as co-producer of "Gypsy." "We moved out here because, with our daughters, I wanted to spend more time at home. This is a good environment for me to write with the fewest interruptions. And Bonnie encourages me to write. She'll say I'll take the kids to camp, you write that script. She'll say I'll go to the city, you stay here with the kids. And be sure to write."

The girls are 5, 12 and 18. Bonnie is the mother of the youngest. The two oldest are from his prior marriage.

I asked Lane how he had met Bonnie and how he first came to be out in the Hamptons.

"Bonnie was the host of a travel show on a cable network and she interviewed me," Lane said. "It was for one of my less successful shows. As for the first time I came out here, it was at the invitation of Marty Richards. He was having a party at his house in Southampton for all the co-producers of 'La Cage Aux Folle.' It was also Marty's fifth wedding anniversary. He and Mary Lea were so in love. And it was such a wonderful time. And here I was, in my early thirties, sitting at the table with Bob Fosse and Phyllis Newman, Adolph Green and Betty Comden, Josh Logan. Bonnie and I came out and stayed at the Maidstone Arms and I scouted around. We were starting a family. I was looking for a place for the kids to go in the summertime. And there was so much stuff here, bikes, scooters, crafts, swimming.

"Other reasons we are here? It is quiet. Many of my friends are here. It is close to New York. It is sophisticated. And it is accessible. I directed a play in Nantucket and another in Martha's Vineyard. Something goes wrong and you need a doctor for example and you are in big trouble."

Lane is not only doing a screen adaptation for "If it was Easy..." this summer, he is also rewriting "In the Wings," and he is working on a new play in praise of American business entitled "American Way."

I asked Lane where and how he does his writing. He seemed surprised I would ask this. But he answered.

"At the beach. Longhand. Then I transcribe it on the computer."

The beach is where I write too, I told him. I've met a lot of people that write at the beach. •

Who's Here

By Jan Silver

Several Democratic members of Congress have been speaking at open forums here this summer—Sen. Joe Lieberman in Westhampton Beach, and Reps. Barney Frank and Peter Deutsch in East Hampton — but the trend started on a rainy Sunday morning, June 8, when Nancy Pelosi spoke at the Jewish Center of the Hamptons in East Hampton. Representing California's 8th Congressional District, which includes San Francisco, Mrs. Pelosi was elected to Congress in 1988 and last year became the first woman to lead House Democrats.

Nancy Pelosi

Democrat Party Leader
U.S. House of Representatives

A slender, attractive brunette, Nancy D'Alesandro Pelosi was born into a family with a strong tradition of public service. Her father, Thomas D'Alesandro Jr., served as Baltimore's mayor for 12 years and then its five-term congressman. Her brother Thomas D'Alesandro III also served as mayor of Baltimore.

Nancy Pelosi graduated from Trinity College, Washington, D.C., in 1962 and, shortly thereafter, met and married Paul Pelosi, an investment banker. His work took the couple to California, where they settled and raised five children. (They now have five grandchildren.) She began her political career as a Democratic Party volunteer.

During her 15 years in Congress, Nancy Pelosi has been a member of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and taken a leading role in environmental issues, health care, the economy, education and homeland security. She was elected Democratic Whip of the House in 2001, and elevated by her peers to House Democratic leader on November 14, 2002. She is considered a coalition-builder by many House members.

An impressive and knowledgeable speaker, Rep. Pelosi offered some prepared remarks and then took many questions from the audience about the Democratic Party, Iraq, the Middle East, and other issues. The first question asked? As the Democratic House leader, does she have any input over what comes before the House? "No — but I do have a good social rapport with Dennis Hastert [Speaker of the House]. Then she added, with a gleam in her eye, "When I am Speaker, there will be more bipartisan input."

"If you are a Republican, take back your party. It has been hijacked by the right wing."

"Since 1994, when Republican Newt [illegible] op-portunity for 'other voices' to be heard in the House was closed.... Democrats will have to find a way to leapfrog over" the Congressional and media control exerted by the Bush Administration.

When another audience member asked "Where are the Democrats?" in the current national political debate. Pelosi replied: "Almost 100 percent of House Democrats voted against Bush's budget, but we are not heard. It is our fault because we did not have a better message in the 2000 elections."

Speaking about the Israeli-Palestinian situation, she said: "It is a challenge. No one said it would be easy and no one expected Hamas [the Palestinian terrorist organization] to join in easily.... I am committed to a secure Israel, and it is in our national interest.... I do support President Bush's leadership in the Middle East, but I feel the road map should not be about chronology but about performance and the cessation of violence."

Then she talked about U.S. security, noting "Never have we been so dependent on other countries for our support and security.... The way to our security is through multi-lateralism: integrating other nation's economies and politics with ours.... We will have to be bold, creative and imaginative to make a better future."

Speaking to President Bush after the U.S. military victory in Iraq, Pelosi says she told him: "We have shown our strength — now we must show our greatness" by stopping the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, promoting democracy in the Middle East and elevating the standard of living in the U.S.

She stated than Iran has been developing WMD for years and also supporting and exporting terrorism. Russia and China supplied Iran with many of these weapons and she salutes President Bush for putting pressure on them to stop.

When questioned about our loss of civil liberties since 9/11, Pelosi replied: "The Bush administration has over-reached on curbing civil liberties." The Democrats defended against this by having a "sunset" [expiration] clause in the first post-9/11 security bill [called Patriot One], "but if we don't speak up about these civil liberties issues, shame on us!"

Pelosi believes the private sector is very important to the success of the U.S. economy, but with that success comes "a social compact of community responsibility" whereby the private sector has some obligation to help the public sector. For example, "nothing does more to grow our economy than education, from pre-school to continuing education for adults. Education is fundamental to our democracy."

When asked what happened to President Bush's "leave-no-child-behind" policy, she said: "There is a credibility gap with this administration. The policy was a photo-op announcement in the Rose Garden and then was underfunded in the budget. Even the $400-per-child tax credit to be given to all families with children was somehow left out of the current budget for poor families." She then stated that two-thirds of African American children in the U.S. are raised in homes with a net worth of less than $1000.

Regarding the Bush Administration's judicial nominees: "The way to overcome ultra-conservative appointees is to elect a [more centrist] President, Senate and House." She then thanked East End residents for sending "a Congressman the caliber of Tim Bishop to the House."

Pelosi's comment on the need for national health insurance: "Imagine if people were not locked into jobs they dislike just to keep their health insurance" it could have a positive effect on the economy. And her outlook on the Bush Administration's environmental policy — "Thirty years of progress on the environment is being slowly eroded."

Then she spoke about diversity. "We must appreciate the different groups in our society. We are constantly re-invigorated by our newest immigrants...". Of the four Congressional leaders (Senate majority and minority, House Speaker and minority leader), she feels she "represents the most diversified constituency because Democrats elected to the House represent the most diverse populations in the U.S."

When questioned about the possibility of electoral reform after the 2000 Presidential election debacle, Pelosi feels a majority vote to elect the President might be workable but it would require "a big public relations campaign and experience with this type of election" before it could be introduced nationally.

She paused and then said, "If you are a Republican, take back your party. It has been hijacked by the right wing."

Pelosi seemed to relish the Q & A session and would have stayed on to answer more questions, but had to return to Washington. She concluded her talk by reminding the audience, "We have to do a better job of attracting good people to politics." •

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #260
A Day In The Office

Having spent too much money at Bridgehampton Commons, I decided to continue on the Montauk Highway to see a friend in Riverhead when my van took a sudden left into the Dan's Papers parking lot. It had been awhile since I actually come in and made an offering at the Sign of the Hat, so I knew I'd better make it a good one.

The front office was calm and peaceful, no one was screaming or fighting and the carpet was blood free, so I knew right away Dan wasn't there. I made my way into the back office and was greeted by the tall bronzed Adonis named Josh, who disguises himself as a mere overworked and underpaid managing editor. We sat and talked awhile.

The back office which houses thirty seven people lavishly spread out over three long desks, was one giant mound of paper except of course for the beautiful Marie Tennariello's desk, which was neat, well organized and elegantly appointed with a Snow White iMac. I am giving her the new nickname of "Snow White Tennariello." Not only because of her tidiness, but because it would take seven men to replace her.

On one of the desks, genius was obvious. The wooden ship of creativity was upholstered with thick layers of papers, multiple disc forming a bulwark to protect it from the encroachment of neighboring wads of paper. An empty beer bottle, Three cans of diet coke and the rind of one former lime laid in plain sight, a testament to efforts of the tormented genius that sits there.

The crisis du jour revolved around next Memorial Day's issue WOW! When these people plan ahead, they are serious!, Josh the Jenius managed the crisis and navigated the staff through the impasse with the ease of an ultra pro. He whipped out his tiny favorite tool, his cell phone, and delegated, redelegated and tailgated each detail to completion.

I have refused to carry a cell phone because I hate it when I'm talking to someone and they start ringing. But, Josh's little thing, the cell phone, was different. He said I could hold it. It was the size of my IUD, something Josh was thrilled to know. It has a little color computer screen with fish swimming on it. I turned it face down and shook it side to side to clear the screen so I could draw a new picture, but Josh explained it wasn't an Etch-A-Sketch cell phone, Dan has that one. I still wasn't totally sold on the cell phone idea until he told me I could play games on it and I love games. I pressed a few of his buttons and I could see that Josh loves games too. There was a link to OTB, Harrah's Football Pool, and the Caesar's Palace Pool on how many Manhattan dailies will have an article about Dan this week.

But by far the most impressive project Josh was working on was the new, soon to be announced, Dan TV, the DTV Network. All Dan, all day, all night and all the time. The program, there's only one so far, is the Dan's Day, a reality show that runs twenty-four hours a day and shows what Dan is doing all the time. In the spirit of the personal sacrifices that has made Dan great, he has had a camera wired to his neck so, the Dan Cam. We will see up close and personal as he hob nobs with all nobs great and small. The world will finally know…does he sleep with that hat on or not? And when he dials me in the middle of the night to talk about my full page spread, the world will finally know about us too…

Filmmaker's DIARY

David Nemer, Donald Pruden and Keif Roberts are shooting their debut feature film, "Fallout," at Pinewood West Studios in East Hampton from July 21-August 10. The following is David's ongoing diary of the making of the film.

Monday, August 4, 10:15 p.m.- Today could've been a disaster.

After finishing up great last week and getting back on schedule, we had only been shooting for about 15 minutes this morning when our camera went down. Greg Messina and his crew identified the problem as a tape slack error, meaning that the tape wasn't feeding properly which caused the camera to automatically shut off. However, they weren't sure of the exact source of the problem. As they worked to troubleshoot it, everyone else on crew instantly jumped on the phones looking for someone who might possess a Sony DSR-500 to temporarily loan to us and get us back up and running. Zev Tambor even played phone tag with a friend vacationing in Paris whose camera was stored in his Manhattan apartment. (I wonder if that at least qualifies us an international film project.) But after two hours, we had no luck.

Eventually though, Zev came through huge for us by figuring out a way to fire-wire our camera to an external recording device. It was a bandage job that might work. The idea was that the camera was still able to shoot an image, but it just needed a means to record the footage and store it. Zev had the necessary equipment at his house and quickly retrieved it and started hooking it up. Meanwhile, I arranged for us to rent a camera for the rest of the week from a shop in the city, and very fortunately, Tom Denier's brother was just leaving Tom's studio in Brooklyn to meet us out here when we contacted him and had him first head into Manhattan to pick up the new camera.

In the end, by the time we got back up and running, the episode cost us six hours of shooting time and $1,050 for a new camera. And I keep realizing that that's just the Lady Luck nature of independent filmmaking. You go day after day staying on schedule and saving $20 here and $50 there to keep within the budget, and it's like you're driving into the sunset with the top down thinking you'll always be happy. But then in a moment, you get blindsided with the whole shoot in jeopardy, and you need to find an unforeseen thousand dollars to keep it going, and that's when you wake up one morning and the bitch is gone.

Tuesday, August 5, 6:10 a.m.- Each day that we get further into the script, the special effects make-up work is getting more involved. Today is the fourth day in a row that Tom, Bengt and I have come in around 6:00 a.m. to give Tom enough time to prep Bengt before shooting begins at 9:30. Actually, besides early mornings, Tom is also putting in late nights preparing most of the next days' effects back at the house. The most sleep he gets is during takes, I think. But by the time 5:50 a.m. rolls around each day, Bengt and I take turns shaking Tom to get him off the couch, and he falls into the passenger seat, lights a cigarette and we're on our way. It will most likely be this way for these guys until the end of the shoot, but I'm going to try to get them another ride into the studio tomor-

ATTENTION: DOMESTIC PARTNERS

It is an exciting and hopeful time for lesbian and gay couples: the Supreme Court held that the criminalization of private sexual conduct between same sex partners is illegal; many local governments provide for partner registration; and DirectTV is showing gay and lesbian movies on Pay Per View.

However, in New York Law attempts to control the destiny of gay and lesbian relationships in times of crisis such as sickness, disability, breakup and death by assuming choices with which you may not agree and denying important rights and powers to lifetime partners in favor of biological family members or even strangers.

This is the time to ask yourself who you want to make decisions about health care, finances, property rights, and inheritance should you be unable to do so. Take control of your future by executing legal documents to formalize your decisions, making your wishes known.

Vermont between 1991 and 2002, and is now running for President, drove out here last month to make a speech and visit his mother. She lives in East Hampton. Other relatives of his live in Sag Harbor and Shelter Island. He'll be back down again at Christmastime, if things go as planned. Dean, now 52, fished, hiked, swam and sailed out here growing up. His grandparents were year around full-time residents of the Hamptons. But his parents had moved to Manhattan and used their house just to come out summers. The family had a membership at the Devon Yacht Club in Amagansett. Howard was a lifeguard there.

Dean went to private school in Manhattan, then got an M.D. and went into practice in Vermont. He became a state representative in the 1980s, was elected Lieutenant Governor in the late 1980s and then in 1989 became Governor on the death of the sitting Governor, Richard Snelling. Dean made major changes and improvements in the health care system and the education system in that state during his ten years as Governor. He was re-elected six times. He also signed a law making Vermont the first state in the union to endorse same-sex marriages.

No sitting Republican President or Vice President has visited the Hamptons as far as I know for at least a quarter of a century. •

Answered Questions

What Do You Most Enjoy Doing In The Hamptons?

This Week's Answer By:

Robert Upton

To those who have read my latest novel *The Big Tour (*and if you haven't you should) it will come as no surprise that my favorite activity in the Hamptons is golf. Sometimes. At least after a good round. (Is it too late to change my activity?) Unfortunately, yes. For, as anyone who plays this masochistic game well knows, no one gets out of golf alive. However, contrary to the cliché, golf is not an addiction. It's much worse. It's a primordial urge to hunt which civilization has not yet entirely suppressed. Sublimated, yes, but never suppressed. For although it's no longer practical to sling a bag of spears over one's shoulder and set off with a few friends to slay a mastodon, it's perfectly reasonable to sling a bag of clubs over one's shoulder and go off to shoot figurative birdies and eagles. So if your spouse complains that you're playing too much golf, explain to him or her that these dates were set millions of years ago and you're powerless to change them.

I don't know how Mark Twain played but I'm sure that if he had ever broken eighty he never would have said that golf is a good walk spoiled. And if he had ever played Shinnecock Hills, The National, Noyac, Montauk Downs, or any of the other truly extraordinary golf courses on the East End, he would have said something more like, "What time tomorrow?"

So even if the ocean should dry up and all the wonderful cultural and social events come to an end, I'll still be out here whacking that little white ball and chasing after it. And even though I know too well how painful golf can be, I also know the pleasure, and it is bliss.

Robert Upton belongs to the Noyac Golf Club where he once shot 78, but has not enjoyed himself since. His latest novel, The Big Tour, is set largely in the Hamptons.

ment building across the street from their apartment had been placed there by her husband in order to spy on them. The children were so afraid that Ammon arranged to take them into that apartment building to meet with the man who owned the satellite dish so he could explain its true purpose.

The murder occurred just five days before the scheduled signing of the divorce agreement between Generosa and Ted Ammon. The result of this was that instead of the two splitting up Ted Ammon's fortune, which has been estimated at about $60 million, the entire amount would go his wife, Generosa Ammon, a small part of which would be in trust for their children, who were still about ten years away from becoming adults. Ammon had told people that, in light of his upcoming divorce, he intended to change his will to cut Generosa out. Apparently, however, he never got around to doing so. It also came to light that Daniel Pelosi had installed the burglar alarm system at the Ammon house on Middle Lane in East Hampton, something which had been done at a time when all three persons were on better terms.

And so, the police investigation began. There were no fingerprints, there was no murder weapon, and with the security system off there were no TV monitors of the interior of the house. An oddity about the house was that in the kitchen there was a dog door not hooked into the alarm system. It was large enough for an adult to get in or out.

Generosa had bills to pay. The staff in Surrey on their big country estate. The workmen who were now completing the renovation of the duplex. With the will not yet probated, she didn't have clear access to the money. Indeed, at one point she went to the Morgan Bank where Ammon's funds were kept in a joint account and tried to withdraw several million dollars. But the bank refused.

At this point, Generosa Ammon did something that, in a very major way, affected the landscape of downtown East Hampton. She owned a then vacant auto showroom directly across from the East Hampton Post Office. One side of the showroom property borders the East Hampton Village Green at the eastern end of town. There had been an attempt by the Village to buy the showroom from her, which she had rebuffed, probably because she thought she could get more money for it. Now she offered to sell it to the Village at the smaller amount. They leaped at the chance. They paid her $3.25 million. She signed over the deed and within thirty days they had torn the showroom down, carted away the debris and planted the entire property in a continuation of the Village Green lawn.

Now things happened very quickly. Pelosi's wife in Manorville sued him for divorce citing, among other things, physical abuse, and Pelosi signed on the dotted line. The next day, Generosa Ammon and Daniel Pelosi quietly got married in front of a justice of the peace in Queens, packed up and moved to their Surrey mansion with the twins to get away from what they described, accurately, as a "media frenzy." The media frenzy followed them, however, and this led, on several occasions, to Pelosi slamming the front door to avoid talking to reporters. This went on for two weeks before it finally calmed down.

But then it was learned that Pelosi had been on parole after repeated convictions for driving while intoxicated. His defense in some of the cases was that, when he was pulled over, he hadn't been driving at all, that he had been curled up asleep in the backseat (where the officers had found him) and that the actual driver of the car had leaped out after pulling over and run away. The police had actually seen him leaping over the front seat into the back in the interval while they walked over to check license and registration. Judges had not bought this defense.

In any case, there was, just before the fleeing to England, still another case of driving while intoxicated pending — he had been pulled over in East Hampton — and now there were papers filed to extridite him back to America to face the new court dates. He went, and an East Hampton judge pulled his passport so he could not go to England. He subsequently sentenced him to a year in jail.

Pelosi, now waiting for his jail time to commence, took up residence in a small ranch house in East Moriches not far from his ex-wife and six children. And shortly thereafter Generosa took her two children to live with her husband there. The Surrey mansion was put up for sale.

At this point, it was learned that Generosa Ammon Pelosi had been diagnosed with breast cancer and had less than a year to live. There was nothing that anybody could do. Soon thereafter,

Roy Scheider and some of his oceanfront neighbors are advocates for the incorporation of the Village of Dune Hampton, envisioned along the oceanfront from Southampton to East Hampton. The concept was formalized in a petition presented on July 3, and it will be discussed at a meeting on August 15 in Bridgehampton. The only aspect that Mr. Scheider would like to see amended is the new village's name. Amity, perhaps?

Uptown Girls

The red carpet was jam packed with the rich and famous who came out to see Brittany Murphy, the star of Uptown Girls in the East Coast premiere at the Southampton UA. I caught up with Brittany, her famous co-stars and a slew of celebrity guests. Brittany plays a rich privileged daughter of a rock star that suddenly loses everything and is forced to get a real job as a nanny. Brittany made an unforgettable entrance onto the red carpet, escorted by her new, post-Ashton Kutcher boy-friend, Jeff Kwatinetz, and dressed in a dress similar to Mac lipstick color, Super Glam (rose), designed by Emanuel Ungaro. It was a beautiful romantic lacey ruffled tight gown. She was absolutely glowing. I loved the fact that when a reporter asked Brittany what designer she was wearing, she had no idea, answering in a perfectly sweet naive way, "I'm not sure." I assumed it was because she could ultimately care less about the label. Maybe she's just a great actress, or maybe that's what I would like to believe. Ahhh, the magic of Hollywood.

Anyway, Brittany had this aura of appreciation. She was very in the moment. At one point she actually stopped our interview to kindly ask a photographer to stop snapping photos and promised, "as soon as I'm finished with these interviews, you can snap away, but it distracts us, so please hold off." Now, don't be fooled... Brittany sure knows how to take care of the business. She made a point of telling me, "They (Green Street Productions and MGM) asked me to be a part of this film, and the reason I decided to do it, is because I couldn't resist. The original script was peppered with fairy dust and magic. I think that is very rare in a script. The main message is to be brave, be bold, believe in yourself."

The entire cast walked the red carpet

Laptop

she and Pelosi separated and she moved to East Hampton with the children to receive medication and hospice care in comfort.

And that's where the matter stands today.

There have been plenty of lawsuits and legal briefs. Ted Ammon's sister has applied for temporary custody of the twins. Friends and colleagues of Pelosi have filed lawsuits claiming that police intimidated them and roughed them up while trying to get information about the whereabouts of Pelosi at the time of the murder. Generosa Ammon, appearing in court thin and frail, applied to the court requesting that a court-appointed custodian be named to take care of the twins in the event that she died before her husband got out of jail.

Needless to say, Daniel Pelosi remains the chief suspect. There does not seem to be anyone else other than he and Generosa who would have anything to gain by murdering him. Ammon was a respected businessman with few enemies. Everyone liked him. Nothing was taken so burglary has been ruled out as a motive, although it is possible a potential burgler had done this and then fled before taking anything.

And so now we come to the laptop. IF it is found, and IF it has not been tampered with and IF it shows that somebody turned OFF the burglar alarm system after the murder occurred, there would be a pretty good circumstantial case to be made against Daniel Pelosi. He knew the code, after all. He'd set it up.

• Nobody could possibly believe this story. •

"It is the second largest attraction in the State of New York, right after Niagra Falls," he said.

Other facilities in that area include the Splish Splash Water Park and, in downtown Riverhead, the Riverhead Aquarium which opened two years ago as a tourist destination and is bringing into the community an additional two million people a year. Riverhead is also trying to develop a giant formerly restricted military base in the pine barrens, about 2,900 acres, that was a gift to them from the now departed Grumman Aerospace Corporation. It includes an airport, laboratories, storage facilities and factory assembly areas, all surrounded by miles of vacant land. Recently, due to poor advance planning, two rock concerts that might have brought 40,000 to 70,000 people to the runway of the former Grumman facility on two separate weekends this past summer had to be cancelled. The former Grumman facility, now renamed the Riverhead Economic Development Zone, still awaits tenants.

I don't have to sing the praises of the few legal development sites in the pine barrens — the rest are in preservation — most everyone knows what they are, and in spite of what would be scattered opposition to a casino there, such a facility would be, and should be welcomed with open arms. If we had to have a casino on the east end, this area — from the airport in Westhampton to the recently abandoned Grucci Fireworks factory and testing facility twelve miles to the north, both in the pine barrens, is probably the place to put it.

There are those who will say that since this writer lives way out east, in the Hamptons, where the casino is currently proposed, this whole article is just another example of Not in My Back Yard. But I would dispute this. The situation seems so obvious. A depressed area with few people, miles and miles of open space separating it from anything else, the best chance for good transportation opportunities and the easy possibility for a land swap — well, what else would you want?

Of course, we may not get a casino on the eastern end of Long Island. the tribe may fail in its attempts to get federal recognition. The tribe may fail to get offsite permissions. It is a matter for the Federal Courts to decide. And that, of course, is Ivy Ong's gamble.

There was an article in the New York Times two weeks ago about how NOT to deal with a tribal gambling facility proposal. Up in the Catskills, local opposition was so fierce and bitter that when the casino was finally approved by the Federal government — that was all that was needed — the local population found themselves totally out of the loop. The tribe made the money. And unlike other areas where the tribe paid to improve the surrounding infrastructure as part of the deal, it was the local towns that paid, and got nothing in return. Also, what they did provide was completely inadequate.

The billionaire has offered the money and the tribal family has accepted it. In this case, unlike the book I read where the family crumbled, the tribal family, no matter what happens, will probably grow stronger because of it. Now there's a new reality and a new problem. Fighting among ourselves in this community will not solve it. • row so I can at least get one decent span of sleep and start running at normal speed again.

Saturday, August 9, 4:15 a.m.- Today was our culminating day and one we'll always remember.

It started Thursday night as Tom prepared his last major effect for Bengt and laid it out in our kitchen at the house to settle overnight. It was an effect that we built our entire day around and one that, honestly, was a major factor in my decision to hire Tom.

However — long story short — we had a new PA staying at the house with us Thursday night who came to us with good recommendations but little skills or likeability. And sometime during the night, this bundle of annoyance took it upon himself to turn off the air conditioning in the house — unconcerned that eight other people may have been comfortable, and unaware that the house needed to stay cool for Tom's effect to set properly. We woke up Friday morning to realize that Tom's work didn't set right and needed to be started all over again. An eight-hour job.

David and Donald instantly reshuffled the shooting schedule for Friday to provide Tom the time needed to recreate his work, Shay spent a good part of the day doing close-up shots he read with crew members, and we put the PA on the first bus back home to mommy and daddy in Connecticut. Finally, by 6 p.m., Tom finished the effect again and started applying it to Bengt — another eight-hour job.

Fortunately, Donald and David did a terrific job of filling most of the time with extra pick-up shots and stealing some shots from Saturday. And by 2 a.m., we were ready to shoot our scenes with Bengt. We only needed to get four shots with him, and when Bengt's body started to rebel a little too much against the effects, Donald cut the last one. Tom's work looks incredible, though, and we got our best shots and finally finished at 4 a.m. As much as everyone's commitment helped them hang in for an unforeseen never-ending day, I think their curiosity to see Tom's work played just as big a role. But it was a testament to everyone the way they responded, and made for a special way to end our last, big day of shooting.

Sunday, August 10, 9:45 p.m.- It's a wrap. There's no more questions or anxiousness or wondering if we'll finish.

I'll write more in the upcoming days about the individuals who carried this out and where we go from here and what it's like to get back into everyday life again. For starters, we moved out of the studio and the house today, and said our goodbyes for now, and that was a lot of different emotions to deal with. And I'm sure it's going to take a while for it to sink in what we did. It just helps me right now to know that this was just one part of a bigger process — an intense, emotional, draining and incredible part — but that there's much more to come.

including Brittany's co-star, Dakota Fanning, who's nine years old going on forty, "I recently learned how to play the piano, so I love doing that, and I love to read. I'm in the middle of the fifth Harry Potter book. I'm on page four-hundred and fifty," Dakota quipped. Marley Shelton plays Brittany's best friend and shared what it was like on the movie set. "There was a lot of estrogen floating around, but we had a great time," she said. Handsome Aussie, Jesse Spencer, Brittany's love interest in the movie agreed.

"There's so many woman on the set, I was like 'come on where's the guys man?' I was surrounded by woman." But, Brittany promises it's not a chic flick! "Its' not gender specific, it's not age specific, and you can take your whole family, yet it's a date film and I love that."

Celebrity guests kept rolling down the red carpet including, Ralph Macchio and his daughter Julia, Lorraine Bracco, Designer Jill Stuart, and a very brave Cathy Moriarty who had her hands full with over nine kids running down the red carpet. "I got my three, my niece my nephew, I took all the kids." She wasn't kidding.

Britany Murphy was the center of attraction and the star of the evening, but when Former Mayor Rudolph Giuliani and his new wife Judy Nathan showed up the tables turned, and Brittany was completely star struck. Brittany gasped, "Rudy Giuliani, hello." She turned to me and mummerd, "I'm about to pass out!" Giuliani pat Brittany on the back and said, "She's gonna do great."

At this point, Brittany is screaming at me like an over emotional schoolgirl who just got an autograph from Justin Timberlake, "I'm completely star struck, I've never been this star struck in my entire life. He saved all of our lives, and I can't believe this is happening. I can't even ignore the fact that he is just a foot away. I am literally going to pass out. I'm just completely in awe." I calmed Brittany down, reminding her that this is her big night. Then I caught up with the former mayor and his new wife Judy Nathan. Giuliani admitted to me, "We are here because my daughter and her friend wanted to see the movie. I think they will enjoy it very much." The newlyweds are still flying high on love. "It feels wonderful," Giuliani said. Questioning his wife, "How does it feel?" "Fantastic," Judy replied. Giuliani shared, "We have been enjoying some free time golfing together." Are you a good golfer? I asked. Giuliani joked, "No but I like to play."

Until next week... Life is short! You only live once, party on!

EVENING FROM THE HEART

Record mogul Ahmet Ertegun and his wife Mica opened their "Boatman House" in Southampton for the Evening From the Heart party to benefit the Foundation for the Advancement of Cardiac Therapies (FACT). The man behind the foundation is Dr. Mehmet Oz, not only a great doctor but also voted one of the Sexiest Men on Earth by People Magazine. The Chair was Andre Leon Talley, Editor-at-Large of Vogue. Andre Leon and I shared war stories of the many years we both attended the Pret-a-Porter fashion shows in Paris.

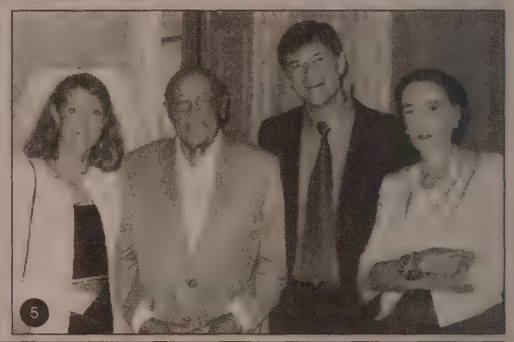
UPTOWN GIRLS

The premiere of the new Brittany Murphy film, Uptown Girls, was held at The UA Southampton Theater. Dakota Fanning stole the premiere with such presence, it was her signing autographs so carefully that was the only sign this is really a kid. The After-party was held at the Atlantic Hotel where stars and other celebrities mingled with guests. A surprise couple, Mayor Rudy Giuliani and his bride, Judi Nathan, showed and the buzz drowned out DJ Sam Ronson's great mix. They graciously spent much of the evening allowing photographs with guests. Ralph Macchio was there, too. He's no longer just the Karate Kid, he's a dad with a "tweenage" daughter.



1. Judi Nathan and Rudy Giuliani 2. Brittany Murphy 3. Ralph Macchio 4. Dakota Fanning 5. Fisher Stevens and Allison Jacobs

POLO

The VIP tent at Bridgehampton Polo was hopping with polo fans and socializers getting in the next to last week of the matches. LA Law co-star Blair Underwood was there with his family. Blair is looking dashing these days and he appears in Sex and The City. The main sponsor this week was Town and Country Magazine.

1. Desiree and Blair Underwood 2. Ron Hainsey, Mike Komisarek, Judy and Rod Gilbert 3. L. Marilyn Crawford 4. Kathy Hilton 5. Neil Hirsch

BIG EVENTS OF THE WEEK

Andrew Levin Memorial Park

Garden Party
At Tifereth Israel In Greenport

Greenport's Congregation Tifereth Israel was founded over a century ago. The first service was held during the High Holy Days of 1892, and in 1900, a small group of men assembled in the home of Nathan Goldin to organize the Jewish families of Greenport into a formal congregation. Samuel Levine, in a history of the first 50 years of Temple Tifereth Israel, wrote, "... their assets were mainly faith, as they were certainly poor in worldly possessions."

Celebrate the faith that continues today as the Daughters of Israel of Congregation Tifereth Israel host their annual garden party at the Andrew Levin Memorial Park, adjacent to the 4th Street synagogue in Greenport, on Sunday August 17 at 4 p.m. The beautiful park was dedicated in 2000 by Greenport's Levin Family after the tragic, accidental death of their son and brother, Andrew Z. Levin.

The public is invited to enjoy good food and drink and fellowship. Donation: $18. Call 734-7520 or 477-8616.

Beyond Therapy
Opens At Former Vision Theater

Those of you out there nostalgic for the 70s (no matter your age) shouldn't miss Acting Out Loud Theatre Company's production of Christopher Durang's hilarious adult comedy Beyond Therapy, which opens this weekend, August 15, at the new Riverhead Performing Arts Center (former Vision Theater) at 49 East Main Street in downtown Riverhead. The play is firmly rooted in a particular time and place – late '70s New York – and Durang pokes fun at the frailties of a "sensitive" generation embodied by characters Bruce and Prudence, who meet at a restaurant after finding each other in the personal ads.

Trouble is, Bruce is bisexual, not exactly what Prudence had in mind when she agreed to the date. But Bruce works hard to convince her that his male lover, Bob, could live over the garage at the home that Bruce and Prudence will buy after she agrees to marry him. Though this first date ends badly, it is, fortunately for the audience, not their last.

Though Vision Theater was an ambitious and welcome addition to Riverhead's downtown, when the private company began to struggle to keep its doors open, Riverhead Business Improvement District President Tim Yousik approached Riverhead Town Supervisor Kosakiewicz last October with a suggestion that the Town step in and keep this valuable community resource going. Thanks to the efforts of all involved, the playhouse will remain as a wonderful venue for live performances.

Beyond Therapy will run from August 15 through September 6. Call 631-765-1973 for show times and to reserve tickets, which are $15.

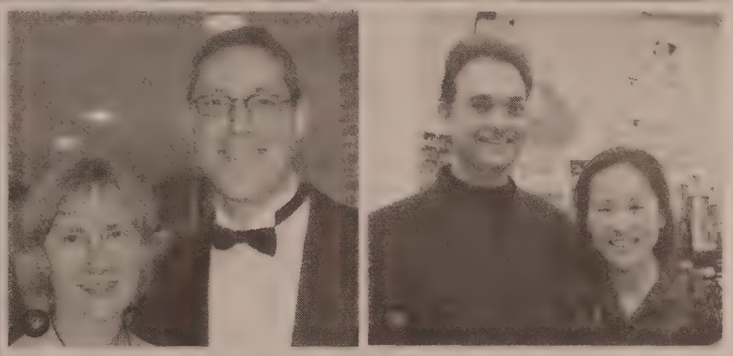
Peconic Chamber Orchestra Concert, August 7



The Peconic Chamber Orchestra, founded by Artistic Director Jesus Manuel Berard, performed a splendid and challenging program on the evening of August 7 at Southold High School. Works by Mozart, Stravinsky and Hindemith were included, and a dazzling rendition of Copland's "Appalachian Spring" elicited an emotional response. But the highlight of the evening was the world premiere of Greenport composer George Cork Maul's "Piece for String Orchestra." How does it feel to hear your own music performed for the first time before a live audience? "There's nothing like it, nothing at all that even comes close," commented Maul.

Igor Babilov: Portrait And Figurative Artist

Igor V. Babailov, a graduate of Moscow's Surikov Academy of Fine Arts, painted his first portrait at the age of four. Honored with the title "Living Master" by the Art Renewal Center, Mr. Babailov has, over the past 20 years, painted numerous portraits of the social, business and political elite, including President George W. Bush, former New York Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, President V.V. Putin of Russia, Nelson Mandela, Senator Hillary R. Clinton, Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, and hockey legend Bobby Hull.

Mr. Babailov is one of the few contemporary artists and the first New Yorker to be commissioned by the Vatican Museum to paint the official historical portrait of Pope John Paul II, and he has just completed a portrait of TV celebrity Regis Philbin, which was featured on the Regis and Kelly Morning Show.

In 1996, Mr. Babilov organized the first official delegation visit of American artists to Russia and has taught at the prestigious Florence Academy of Art. There are two books published on his life and works. He has a waterfront studio in Shoreham.

Claudio's Clam Bar

Main Street Dock, Greenport
631-477-1889

Fifteen years ago, Jerry Tuthill went to his father-in-law, Bill Claudio Sr., and suggested that they open a clam bar on the dock in front of the main Greenport restaurant. The building they put up housed just a small bar and six tables and the menu ran to hot dogs, clams on the half shell, and clam chowder. What a difference today. Claudio's Clam Bar still has the same name but on a busy summer weekend afternoon or evening the Clam Bar, which now fills the whole end of the dock, will serve close to 2000 meals and offer live entertainment from some of the top bands on Long Island and New York.

Jerry and his wife Beatrice run this hotbed of activity admirably, aided by the skillful management of Steve Pisacano, who has been there from the beginning, and Francisco De'Paz, the executive chef who hails from Guatemala and Belize. De'Paz is now in his second season here after cooking on the South Fork and Manhattan.

So, why do people throng to Claudio's Clam Bar? Firstly, the restaurant has one of the finest waterside locations you can ever imagine. You are literally seated over the water and the views of Shelter Island, boat traffic on the bay and of sunsets over the Greenport carousel just have to be experienced.

Secondly, this is the place for all who love shellfish and fish. Claudio's employs their own clam diggers to provide the 10,000 or so clams they can go through on a busy day. They can't be any fresher than they are here and as we sampled some of these together with the oysters they have flown in from the very best locations according to the season, the only question was whether to eat them just with a squeeze of lemon or with some of Claudio's special cocktail sauce. It's a matter of taste, but for us the lemon was all that was needed - perfection really needs no addition. In addition to the raw bar, mussels, steamers and clams are available steamed with some great dipping broths. Then there are the baked clams, one of Claudio's all time favorites and once you take that first bite you can understand why.

Talking of perfection, the sesame crusted sashimi tuna confirmed just how wonderful really fresh tuna is and here the accompanying Asian slaw and a wonderful lemongrass ginger vinaigrette and wasabi combined for great a combination of tastes and textures.

Claudio's has been renowned for many years for its clam chowders and the New England version was creamy, full of subtle flavors and, best of all, loaded with clams.

De'Paz enjoys bringing a touch of the islands and of his native Central America to his dishes, and seared tropical shrimp with a mango barbecue glaze and salsa fresca was full of flavors that lingered on the palate like a good wine.

One problem with Claudio's Clam Bar is that the appetizers are so delicious that it can be like a Long Island wedding, where leaving room for the main dinner is difficult when faced with the tempting array of the cocktail hour!

We had to try the fish and chips though and this was made from wonderful fresh Atlantic cod and the homemade chips were very addictive. If you want beef or chicken, they have some great sandwiches and wraps and children have their own special menu. Friday is the day for the famed lobster bake where, for around $22, you will be served a wonderful platter of a 1 1/4 pound lobster, surrounded by a selection of mussels, clams, steamers, French fries and fresh corn. De'Paz told us that it is not unusual for over 200 lobster dinners to be served. Lobsters are also available at Claudio's other establishment next door on the dock, Crabby Jerry's, which offers take-out and casual lobster meals cooked to the same high standards

De'Paz also prepares some excellent desserts, such as the crème brulee we tasted, which had a perfect texture and was topped with mixed fresh berries to add another dimension to this classic favorite.

Prices here are extremely reasonable, especially when you factor in the waterfront ambience. Appetizers range from $7 to $11, clams and oysters from $7 to $9 a half dozen, soup $4, and main dishes from $8 to $11. There is a small wine list and a wider range of beers.

Claudio's Clam Bar really is a gem providing a wonderful setting for all kinds of casual dining from big family gatherings to a romantic "dinner a deux" as the sun really does slowly set in the west! Come here and dance the day or night away but above all come for fish and shellfish as fresh as they possibly can be prepared by a very talented young chef.

By the way, the Clam Bar has a beeper system for busy times so you can enjoy the surrounding sights and shops while waiting for a table.

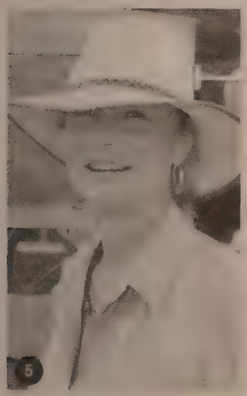
The Farm Picnic to Benefit Breast Cancer H.E.L.P.



The benefit held at North Quarter Farm in Riverhead was a rousing success, raising over $15,000 for the cause. Local cuisine, prepared by Tweeds Restaurant and Buffalo Bar, was enjoyed by all. Wine was provided by North Fork vineyards Martha Clara of Jamesport, Paumanok Vineyards, Castello de Borghese, and Palmer Vineyards. Attendees also enjoyed the finish of the re-creation of the 1909 L.I. Derby, the participants all driving pre-WWII vehicles. Ed Tuccio and Dee Muma, owners of North Quarter Farm, were so pleased with the success of this year's event they are already planning for next year.

Cabernet Sauvignon:
A Team Player Stands Alone, Almost

Happily exempt from the "Anything But Chardonnay and Merlot" trend, Cabernet Sauvignon has maintained its dignity even as it has become more and more of a team player here on the North Fork, appearing much more often in meritage blends rather than as a solo star.

While a popular varietal in northern California and other long-growing-season parts of the world, the hang time here is often just too short (due to killing frosts) to reach the grape's potential. But this doesn't stop some ambitious winemakers from making Cab Sauvignon, at least in years when the fall is warm into November.

During the golden days of fall back at the turn of the century (still sounds odd, doesn't it?), winemakers and vineyard managers rejoiced at the extended warm weather that swept our region late into the season, creating what some are hailing as the greatest vintage Long Island has ever seen. The estate-grown grapes (80 percent Cab Sauv and 20 percent Merlot), which were hand-picked and sorted for Martha Clara's 2000 Cabernet Sauvignon, were harvested on November 16 of that year, marking what is still the longest hang time for any of the vineyard's fruit.

The result is a lovely medium-bodied, berry-colored wine with an abundance of spice and brisk tannins. The finish – my favorite part – is long and lively, often not the case when the grapes are harvested earlier. The unfiltered wine was made by Wölffer Estate's winemaker Roman Roth, who has demonstrated again and again his talent and passion for making wonderful reds.

6th Annual Long Island Wine Country Weekend

Friday-Sunday, August 15-17

By Susan Whitney Simm

When Alex and Louisa Hargrave planted their first vines thirty years ago, they couldn't have imagined that, only a few decades later, nearly thirty vineyards and wineries would be in existence on Long Island's East End.

This weekend, celebrate those thirty years of excellence as twenty-five Long Island wineries participate in vertical tastings, winemaker's tours, culinary demonstrations, dancing, picnics and music in the vineyards, and much more. Here are some highlights:

The First Annual Long Island Wine Classic

Bridgehampton, August 23

The kick-off to the Hampton Classic Horse Show, this inaugural event, sponsored by Wine Spectator magazine, will take place in two parts: an afternoon Grand Tasting with gourmet cuisine from some of Long Island and Manhattan's foremost restaurants, including CoolFish, Della Femina, Stone Creek Inn, and The Four Seasons, followed by an elegant wine dinner and auction in the evening. Both events will celebrate Long Island's wine, produce, seafood and poultry in a beautiful setting under the VIP tents at the Hampton Classic.

GRAND TASTING: $150

The Grand Tasting will take place from 5 to 7 p.m. in the Grand Prix Tent overlooking the ring. This ticketed event will offer guests the opportunity to taste selected wines in Riedel Crystal glasses from all of the Long Island Wine Council's twenty-eight member wineries, including Bedell Cellars, Broadfields Cellars, Galluccio Family Wineries, Lenz Winery, Lieb Family Cellars, Macari Vineyards, Sherwood House Vineyards, and Wölffer Estate.

Available for sampling will be more than 100 wines, paired with delicious foods at more than fifteen chef's stations. Participating chefs will include some of Long Island's top toques, as well as several noted chefs from Manhattan restaurants.

WINE DINNER AND AUCTION (including Grand Tasting): $400

The evening gala dinner and auction will take place from 7 to 10 p.m. in the USET Tent, also overlooking the show's Grand Prix Ring. Master of ceremonies will be renowned food and wine writer John Mariani. Diners will enjoy a superbly catered dinner by the Hampton Classic's acclaimed caterer Robbins Wolfe Eventeurs. The evening will feature music performed by an ensemble from the Long Island Philharmonic. World-class Long Island wines, selected by an independent jury, will be paired with each course. High-end auction lots – wine, travel, fashion, jewelry, and other groupings – will be available for bidding during dinner. Seating will be limited to 490 guests.

Proceeds will benefit the three Eastern Long Island Hospitals: Southampton Hospital, Central Suffolk Hospital, and Eastern Long Island Hospital.

The Hampton Classic's Boutique Garden will be open from 3 p.m. for Long Island Wine Classic guests to visit and shop at the Garden's 35+ boutique stores prior to the tasting.

Wine Spectator has supported the Long Island wine industry's events for many years, having previously sponsored the popular Barrel Tastings as well as participating in its annual Windows on Long Island Wine, held in Manhattan each spring for the past 13 years.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"THEMES AND VARIATIONS" AT ARLENE BUJESE

While the current exhibit's title at the Arlene Bujese Gallery suggests content and subject matter, there are other aspects apparent which signify more formal qualities: namely themes and variations on space. We're not talking about the measurable distance on a surface that indicates length and breath, but distance within a form rather than between forms. Simply put, an opening.

Often this kind of space takes the shape of a "gap," oddly recalling the expression used in the London underground system, "Mind the gap." (The distance between the subway car and the platform.) For example, consider Darlene Charneco's "Weave," where an arrangement of nails creates space plus a bond between delicacy and density.

Marianne Weil's vessels contain interesting slots, produced by space cut into her bronzes. Such openings conjure up the appearance of a figurative "wound," relating to the idea that Ms. Charneco's nails can also cause a literal wound.

On the other hand, Sydney Butchkes' sculptures, especially his painted blue wood one, have distinct space or a gap between extensions as part of the design itself.

Claire Romano's and Margery Harnick's images also possess articulate spaces bewteen certain forms. With Ms. Romano, it's her exploding Venice fireworks' display; with Ms. Harnick it's her purple, whispy "trees", surrounded by other whisps of form and material.

Alex Russo's figure series is predicated on space existing as part of his skeletal features. The anti -war theme created by Mr. Russo in the late 1960's and early 1970's still resonates today, where memories of death camp victims are the primary connection for this critic. His "Promished Land" contains smaller versions of these figures, the various layered images which disappear into the background reminding us that peace and humanity are indeed illusive.

Other works in the show do not deal with these same kinds of configurations, but are noteworthy, nonetheless, including Julie Small - Gamby's figures which meld with their objects. While the figures seem like a departure from Ms. Small - Gamby's previous series, there is an arresting similarity in their archetypical forms.

Edvard Lieber's Long Island photographic cloud series is also a departure, where brilliant color and shape converge into unique patterns.

The show will be on view until August 28.

Honoring the Artist: Walter Bernard

There are very few things we can count on anymore, it seems, considering the unpredictability of the current political / economical climate. If you live in the Hamptons, however, and devoted to sports, there is hope for continuity: notably the annual Artists and Writers baseball game.

If you're artist Walter Bernard, designer of this week's cover and the event's T- Shirts, there's another thing you can count on as well: the Saturday morning Sag Harbor baseball game. According to Mr. Bernard, it's been around for twenty year and is not only good exercise, but also good fun with friends, "where insults and embarrassment rule the day."

During the week, Mr. Bernard pursues his professional duities, not only heading his own company, but working with longtime colleague, Milton Glaser, on various projects. Here, as in his leisure activities, the operative term is "long time."

Thus, Mr. Bernard's career in design and publishing has been steady and continuing, covering a wide range of projects from redesigning magazines like Time to creating titles for such movies as You've Got Mail. Most telling, however, is the idea that Mr. Bernard always has several enterprises going in various stages of development. And who knows how many endeavors he's just thinking about?

(Not to mention the regular get - togethers he has painting with friends.)

Consider, for example, this myraid of projects: a magazine called Law and Order about crime and justice and a community service endeavor, "Born - in - Brooklyn."

The idea for the magazine is not a new one, to hear Mr. Bernard tell it: " I got the idea for a crime publication several years ago. I approached Dick Wolfe, the creator of the TV show, Law and Order, and he was very enthusiastic. The show has integrity in dealing with issues of the day, and the magazine would do the same thing. We would also include service articles about dealing with the system."

The "Born - in - Brooklyn" idea is a new one, Mr. Bernard notes: " This is a community service project that was started a year ago and conceived by Brett Shevack.The concept is to promote the wonderful resources of Brooklyn."

It's apparent that Mr. Bernard would rather talk, however, about the upcoming Artists and Writers Game and the charities it supports. " All the people involved are volunteers, including the founder, Lief Hope," he says with great care. " And all the money goes directly to the charities: The Retreat, Hampton Day Care Center and The East End Hospice."

That you can count on, for sure.

–Marion Wolberg Weiss

First things first. About the current Jennifer Lopez and Ben Affleck celebration of celebrity., Gigli, let's get the "jiggly" jokes out of the way. Gigli is an Italian surname, pronounced Zzzgee-lee and, Ms. Lopez's ampleness does not jiggle! Gigli is Larry Gigli, a mob enforcer, played by Mr. Ben and, putting first things first – he is fecklessly Affleck and, perfectly awful but, how could he stand-out as different to a movie of the same ilk. Gigli is a shoestring production without sole or bootstraps but, long on tongue. Production-wise, it is a $35.00 (if it cost a nickel) B-Movie with a top heavy cost of about $25 million for Ms. Lo and Mr. Ben. Wuz it woit it? I don't do da Goodfella's accent so good. Neither does Benny. Does the J.Lo /Ben celeb combo pay off? In a movie like this, it's as unimportant as the ransom for the mentally challenged young man Ben has kidnapped on orders from the Sopranos section of the mob choir. The loveable, Rain Man, disabled character likes to sing to Hip-Hop songs – he likes sex, too. (I'm thinking, TV might be coming up with a Telethon for all the vaguely brain-vague characters spawned by the successful Rain Man movie.) However, this handicapped young guy is the brother of a federal prosecutor – too important for the simplistic tattoos on Ben's body and mind. So, J. Lo, another enforcer, is sent in to Gigli's already cramped apartment. She arrives with one plain name, Ricki and, little else – like a reason why. Why? Of course, to make a movie for the two "real" life stars of People magazine.

Gigle & Freaky Friday

J. Lo's Ricki is a passionate Yoga practitioner and, confirmed (or, Bas Mitzvahed) lesbian who, in flexing her bodily prowess with an extended Yoga body-pretzeling demonstration, gives the macho bull, Gigli a discourse on the superior quality of the female genital organ. Fortunately, it's only a monologue, she doesn't give a physical display of its' attributes on camera, as she does her well-packed bod', (No doubt a prelude to a video package of "Body Building" tapes to sell alongside her music videos.) J. Lo's hostile, combative, verbal sparring turns Benny on. Personally, all the noise generated by the cliché-dumbed trio, turned me off. Their narcissistic sex bantering was as erotic as a 32 degree sitz bath. Not numbing cold, but not throbbing hot, either.

Like walking into a telephone pole, the movie's makers take on a pertinent notion of female sexual aggression with the male folding with his tail between his legs. Ricki believes Larry is, under his tattooed manliness, symbolically a woman. And, so – to bed. J. Lo's Ricki, in strong, dominating form, is on top. Since the movie and its stars cannot really handle it, Gigli, the movie, awkwardly has "Art imitating Life." Did I write, Art? Well, you understand. Doesn't the Lopez-Affleck combo already have Ben wallowing under the big, tough butt of J. Lo's ethnic pride and talents? He makes a very pretty trophy mate. Clunk! I think Gigli tipped him off the shelf.

There is a terrific little movie with the theme of role and body reversal, it's Freaky Friday, very funny, sharp-as-a-Fender electric guitar and just as contemporary – even tho' it's a remake of the 1976 Disney winner. It's the story of a mother and daughter's problems like the girl's rock band and Mom's fiancé until a freaky bit of magic swaps their bodies. The confusions are riotous and, the resulting understanding of each other's feelings is completely satisfying. A sensible script and its handling is made remarkably entertaining by a better – than –ever Jamie Lee Curtis (she's always been a cracker jack performer) and, as the daughter, Lindsey Lohan, in fine form updating the original Jodie Foster role.

Girlhood and womanhood are sincerely and sympathetically strummed with the good time amplification of sensible comedy. You see, swapping can be real interestin'.

What is it about Greenport that commands our attention? Is it the setting, perched snugly on the shores of Peconic Bay? Leaving aside the geography, perhaps it's the quirky mercantile character of the village: Charming specialty shops everywhere with not a single retail chain store in sight. And let us not forget the skyline. Yes the skyline. Particularly at the intersection of Front and Main, two-story Victorian buildings cut an intriguing zig-zag against the low sky. Throw in numerous exciting restaurants and the answer is clear: Greenport's uniqueness lies in the fact that it is the sum of countless unique parts.

ENTERTAINMENT IN THE HAMPTONS

Take Five 2003 with Jan Silver

Another many-spendored week of entertainment. Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center has international recording star Angelique Kidjo on Friday, and the comedic Les Ballets Trockadero de Monte Carlo on Saturday. East Hampton's Guild Hall has a big-band show with Hilary Kole, Peter Cincotti and Jim Lowe on Friday, stand-up comic Mario Cantone on Saturday, and a musical salute to Broadway composers Kander & Ebb on Sunday. Bridgehampton Chamber Music Festival offers three concerts this week, and Opera of the Hamptons performs "From Opera to Broadway" Saturday in Cutchogue.

Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre has the delightful musical The Boy Friend and noted actors Anne Jackson and Eli Wallach on Monday. The senior stateswoman of jazz, pianist Marian McPartland, plays at Southampton's Parrish Art Museum on Saturday evening, and three well-known oldies groups sing in "The Brooklyn Reunion" at Southampton High School on Saturday.

The Hamptons Shakespeare Festival's Taming of the Shrew plays in Montauk through Sunday, and Mia Farrow, Billy Dee Williams and Montel Williams are in the Off Broadway hit The Exonerated opening next Wednesday at Guild Hall.

There is a wide variety of writers speaking at local venues. The special events this weekend include the Artists & Writers Softball Game in East Hampton, the grand opening celebration for the Southampton Recreation Center, the Animal Rescue Fund's "Bahama Bow Wow" dinner dance, and Roy Scheider with Mercedes Ruehl performing at the Hamptons Shakespeare Festival benefit dinner.

THEATER

Bay Street Theatre just opened the happy, light musical The Boy Friend which is set in the 1920s on the French Riviera. With a Broadway cast directed by Julie Andrews, the show plays Tuesdays through Sundays ($50-60 and $15 student day-of-performance tickets). On Monday at 8 p.m., accomplished actors Anne Jackson and Eli Wallach remember their friend Tennessee Williams through letters and excerpts from his plays ($35). Call the box office at 631-725-9500 for tickets.

Comedian Mario Cantone and a four-piece combo perform at Guild Hall, East Hampton, on Saturday at 8 p.m. ($45) and next Wednesday through Sunday, the acclaimed Off Broadway show about innocent individuals imprisoned for many years, The Exonerated, is onstage ($50-60). The show plays nightly at 8 p.m. with two performances (7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.) on Saturday. For tickets to all Guild Hall shows, call the box office at 631-324-4050.

The Hamptons Shakespeare Festival's "reality TV" take on The Taming of the Shrew runs through Sunday outdoors at Theodore Roosevelt County Park, Montauk, and Montauk Theatre Productions' staging of The Guys, the Off Broadway play about a N.Y.F.D. captain eulogizing his lost men after 9/11, is back at MTP's Studio, 6 So. Elm St., Fri. and Sat. at 8 p.m. ($15) Performers from the East End Songwriters Guild sing at MTP on Sun. night.

MUSIC AND DANCE

International music star Angelique Kidjo comes to the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Friday at 8:30 p.m. ($40-60). Her music mixes West African rhythms with funk, salsa, jazz, rhumba. On Saturday, the all-male comic ballerinas of Les Ballets Trockadero de Monte Carlo will offer their version of classics with excerpts from Swan Lake, Giselle and more ($45-65). (Sunday's show with Neil Sedaka is sold out.) For tickets to WHBPAC shows, call the box office from 1 to 6 p.m. at 631-288-1500.

The beautiful Hilary Kole returns Friday to Guild Hall with young Manhattan cabaret star Peter Cincotti, host Jim Lowe and a good band for "Swing, Swing, Swing." They celebrate the music of the big-band era starting at 8 p.m. ($60). On Sunday, Lee Davis's popular American Musical Theater series salutes Broadway composers Kander & Ebb (Cabaret, Chicago) with musical theater stars Karen Ziemba, Brent Barrett and a surprise guest or two (7:30 p.m., $45). For tickets, call 631-324-4050.

Bridgehampton Chamber Music Festival has a special benefit concert Friday at Channing Daughters Winery featuring festival artists playing the tango rhythms of Argentina's Astor Piazzolla, The evening starts with drinks and hors d'ouevres at 6 p.m. followed by the concert ($75). On Sunday at 6:30 p.m. in the Bridgehampton Presbyterian Church, the music of Vivaldi, Fasch, Schubert and contemporary American composer Bruce Adolphe will be played. Next Wednesday, 7:30 p.m., "Bohemia to Bali" has the world premiere of Paul Moravec's Chamber Symphony plus Vivier, Dvorak and Suk. For tickets ($30 adults, $25 seniors, $10 children), call 631-537-3507.

The eminent jazz pianist Marian McPartland will give a concert on Saturday, 8 p.m., at the Parrish Art Museum. There is limited seating and a reception follows the program. For tickets ($40 members, $60 non-members), call 631-283-2118 ext. 20. Opera of the Hamptons presents its final summer program, "From Opera to Broadway," on Saturday, 6:30 p.m., at the Castello di Borghese Vineyard, Route 48, Cutchogue. The evening includes wine tastings; tickets are $30 in advance (631-728-8804 or 631-734-5111) or $35.

The Mystics ("Hushabye"), The Passions ("Just to be with you") and The Classics ("'Til then") will sing on Saturday at "The Brooklyn Reunion" oldies show presented by the Southampton Lions Club and WLNG at 8 p.m. in Southampton High School. Tickets are $25 at several stores, the Southampton Chamber of Commerce and online at www.hamptons.com/dowop.

Good music at local clubs and restaurants this week: Shemekia Copeland (Fri.), Burning Spear (Mon.), Southside Johnny & Asbury Jukes (Tues.) at Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse; Maidstone Arms, East Hampton--Chris Barrett (Mon. & Tues.), Jane Hastay & Peter Martin Weiss (Thurs. & Fri.), Todd Michaels (Sat.); at Peter Miller, Sag Harbor – blues with Jim Turner (Sun.); in Bridgehampton – Kipling's Trio (Fri. & Sat.), Stefanie Cardinali group (Sun. brunch World Pie, Sun. eve at Pierre's); Southampton – Belle's East; Quogue – Baby Moon.

FILMS

The Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center's world cinema summer series continues with Raising Victor Vargas on Mon. & Tues. (7 and 9:30 p.m.). Everybody knows that the Irish love to have a great time. They can throw a great party. If you haven't been to Buckley's Irish Pub in Southampton, make it a point to do so. I guarantee you'll have fun. Located on Jobs Lane Buckley's has a habit of bringing out the animal in you. Starting with Saturday night they have DJ Pauli mixing the tunes. Sunday night, which is my favorite night there, listen to your friends try and sing to the karaoke machine. Even if you don't have the nerve to get up there you can always sing along with the crowd. The songs are very familiar, perfect drinking songs. On Wednesday night try out lobster night, and Thursday is time for wing night. There is another Buckley's Irish Pub in Center Moriches, (631) 874-6083, and one opening in early September in Hampton Bays. Call (631) 283-4316 for the Southampton location and please come down on Sunday and sing a song for me.

theater review: the boy friend

The perfect antidote for gloomy skies, a skittish economy and seasonal depression? A refreshing trip back to 1926 on the French Riviera via The Boy Friend, a simple, joyous musical comedy that lifts the heart (and even the feet) skyward. Sandy Wilson's light-hearted plot, lyrics and songs are dazzlingly re-invigorated by a strong cast directed by the show's originating Broadway star, Julie Andrews, at Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre.

It is Carnival (Mardi Gras) time and the proper young British ladies at Mme. Dubonnet's finishing school near Nice are atwitter about their young men and the upcoming ball. The first act whizzes by in carefree flapper-style with such endearing song-and-dance numbers as "The Boy Friend" and "Won't You Charleston With Me?" Choreographer John Deluca cleverly puts Bay Street's small thrust stage to maxim use for two to ten singing dancers.

When the heroine Polly Browne (Meredith Patterson) and her love-at-first-site beau Tony (Sean Palmer) are crooning and tap dancing to "I Could Be Happy With You" – the audience is happy, too, because Ms. Andrews has her young leads playing sweetly and lightly, not cloyingly. Other unforgettable characters introduced in Act One are the finishing school's French maid Hortense (the treasured Veanne Cox), the school's headmistress (an elegant and graceful Nancy Hess), Polly's boy-magnet friend Maisie (the enchanting Andrea Chamberlain), Polly's reserved widower father Percival (a dashing Byron Jennings) and Maisie's American swain Bobby Van Dusen (high-kicking Justin Bohon).

In the second act, Tony Walton's sun-drenched blue-green Mediterranean provides great contrast to his cream-colored 1920s bathing costumes for The Boy Friend's playful mood. The young Polly and Tony do a real soft-shoe to "A Room in Bloomsbury," and Hortense almost steals the show with "It's Nicer in Nice." Mme. Dubonnet and Percival Browne add a little seductive humor with "'You-Don't Want-to-Play-With-Me' Blues." The playwright also introduces Lord and Lady Brochurst (Delphi Harrington and Tony Roberts), two upper-class Brits with opposing ways to ease the loss of their runaway son.

The final act opens at the Carnival ball with an iridescent nighttime Mediterranean and glowing city lights, background for the cast's gala ball costumes. a handsome combination of blacks and whites with red accents. Flirty Maisie starts right off with the witty "Safety in Numbers" and the ensemble joins her for the droll song-and-dance "The Riviera." The ogling Lord Brochurst and his Betty Boop amour Dulcie (a delightful Jenny Fellner) get to tease one another in the witty "It's Never Too Late to Fall in Love." The other talented singer/dancers are Rick Faugno, Joyce Chittick, Mark Price, Annie Ramsey, Neal Shrader and Paul Alexander.

In a pre-performance chat, Julie Andrews said she always feels "doubt and insecurity working on a new production," particularly one "in a new area where I'm responsible for everything." With support and encouragement from Bay Street Theatre's co-founders Sybil Christopher, Emma Walton and Steve Hamilton, a fine troupe of performers, and an exceptional creative team (in addition to set/costume designer Tony Walton and choreographer John Deluca, they are co-costume designer Rachel Gruer, lighting designer Eric Schlobohm, sound designer Tony Melfa, orchestrator Paul McKibbins, and musical director Larry Grossman), Ms. Andrews needn't have worried.

Viewed at the final preview performance, she has taken a 1953 London show (she made her Broadway debut in the zippier 1954 Broadway production) and reinvented a complete era – right down to the British accents – where innocence still reigns.

Bay Street Theatre rarely does musicals because such productions are costly. Target Stores helped underwrite The Boy Friend. It plays Tuesdays through Sundays until August 31 at the Sag Harbor theater (631-725-9500). It would be quite a felicitous addition to Manhattan's musical theater scene. –Jan Silver

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

The summer of 2003 has shaped up to be the summer of wall to wall dinner parties. And I must admit I've loved every moment of being on the other side of the kitchen stove.

Filet of beef was a feature at several of the dinners. Albeit costly this lean cut can feed 10-12 when entertaining. For one of the recipes from Ina Garten's Barefoot Contessa Parties! cookbook the oven roasted filet is served with a Gorgonzola sauce. The sauce while rich and creamy an appealing option of horseradish or mustard could substitute.

A particularly creative hostess did it this way. She seasoned the meat then roasted it for 22 minutes. The filets were wrapped in foil and left standing at room temperature until serving time, about 1 1/2 hours. When sliced the filet was perfectly pink within its mustardy, cracked peppercorn crust. When a third hostess was asked for her delicious "grilled just-before-serving" filet she frankly answered, "It was pre-seasoned at the source." So I have taken the liberty of offering my own version of "grilled filet to beef."

While all three filets were delectable the middle recipe was the least work. Since it didn't have to be watched at the grill or in the oven, which, in the case of the first oven roasted filet, it took longer than the specified time in the recipe. But this could have been the fault of the oven it was roasted in. Which leads to another whole subject for when we're ready to roast again.

BAREFOOT CONTESSA'S FILET OF BEEF

The simply dressed filet is served with Gorgonzola sauce. Serves 8-10

For the Gorgonzola sauce

4 cups heavy cream
3-4 ounces crumbly Gorgonzola
3 tablespoons freshly grated Parmesan cheese
3/4 teaspoon each kosher salt and freshly ground pepper
3 tablespoons minced fresh parsley

For the filet

1 whole filet (4 - 5 pounds), trimmed and tied
2 tablespoons unsalted butter at room temperature
1 tablespoons kosher salt
1 tablespoons coarsely ground black pepper

Preheat oven to 500 degrees

1. Prepare sauce while roasting beef. Bring heavy cream to a full boil over medium-heat, then continue to boil rapidly for 45-50 minutes until thickened, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat and add Gorgonzola, Parmesan, salt, pepper and parsley. Whisk rapidly until cheese melts. Keep warm to serve with filet.

2. Place the beef on a baking sheet and pat the outside dry with a paper towel. Spread the butter on with your hands. Sprinkle evenly with the salt and pepper. Roast in the oven for exactly 22 minutes for rare and 25 minutes for medium-rare.

3. Remove the beef from the oven, cover it tightly with aluminum foil, and allow it to rest at room temperature for 20 minutes. Remove the strings and slice the filet thickly.

Adapted from Ina Garten's Barefoot Contessa Parties!

CRACKED PEPPERCORN RUBBED FILET OF BEEF

This hostess had plenty of time between cooking the filet and attending to other culinary endeavors. Be sure to have your butcher tie meat with strings after trimming. Serves 10-12

1 whole filet (5-6 pounds), trimmed and tied
2-3 tablespoons Dijon mustard
3-4 tablespoons coarsely cracked black peppercorns
Coarse (kosher) salt

Preheat oven to 500 degrees

1. Pat beef dry with paper towel and place in a shallow roasting pan just large enough to hold it. With your hands rub the meat all over with the mustard then roll in the cracked peppercorns. Roast for 22-25 minutes or when an instant thermometer inserted into the center reaches 135 -140 degrees. Remove from oven and season with a generous sprinkle of salt. Wrap in foil and let stand at room temperature up to 1 1/2 hours. Remove the foil and strings and slice the filet thickly.

GRILLED TENDERLOIN OF BEEF

Grilling has to be carefully watched but the results are worth it! Serves 8-10

1 whole beef filet, trimmed weight 4-5 pounds
Reserved fat trimmings
3-4 shallots, finely chopped
2 teaspoons cracked black peppercorns
2 teaspoons cracked green peppercorns
1 tablespoon brandy
2 tablespoons soy sauce

1. Ask butcher for fat trimmings after meat is trimmed and tied. Cut fat into small pieces and grind with shallots in workbowl of food processor. (The fat protects this lean cut of meat as it cooks but melts away in the cooking.) Transfer to a mixing bowl and add peppercorns and brandy. Rub the pasty mixture into the meat; covering all surfaces. Marinate for several hours or overnight.

2. Prepare a deep bed of coals until ashen gray or preheat a gas grill to high. Sprinkle filet with soy sauce before placing on the grill. Cover and cook about 6-7 minutes, then, with spatula and tongs, turn and cook covered an additional 5-6 minutes. Uncover and cook about 7-8 minutes longer on each side or until an instant meat thermometer reaches and internal temperature of 135-140 degrees. Baste meat with marinade each time you turn it. Meat should feel springy to the touch when done. Allow to rest for 10-15 minutes before serving. Cut into 1/2-inch thick even slices for serving.

Dining In The Hamptons

MaryJane's

128 N. Main Street, East Hampton
631-324-8008

There is always a sense of anticipation when you enter MaryJane's restaurant, which always reminds me of a wonderfully warm farmhouse that most of us would love to live in. Anticipation of a warm welcome from everyone but especially from MaryJane herself, who exudes charm and that sense of hospitality, which, unfortunately, is often lacking in too many restaurants today. Anticipation of a meal to come that is going to excite your taste buds for this is no novice restaurant still waiting to make its mark but now a seasoned veteran. But, things never stay still at MaryJane's for she is a lady who never stands still, even though she refers to herself as "having two feet firmly planted in the air." This is a totally professional restaurant where the pursuit of excellence is always there but is never obtrusive.

Last season, MaryJane brought in Ken Ruud, who had been cooking at The House of Blues in New Orleans, as Executive Chef to join her already formidable culinary team of Antonio Rios and Edwin Varga. A quick read of the menu, while enjoying some very addictive hot garlic rolls, showed that Ken has slowly but surely changed MaryJane's from being a predominantly Italian restaurant to one where the very best of that style has had imaginative dishes from other parts of the US and abroad added.

The shift in the menu showed with our soup. This was incredible seafood gumbo filled with shellfish, okra and a delicate andouille sausage. The texture was exceptional and all the ingredients really blended so that nothing predominated. The last time I had gumbo was in Commander's Palace in New Orleans and Ken's version was much better!

Chicken satay is another appetizer that is far from Italian and again this version was so, so good. The peanut sauce had just the right degree of bite and dunking the garlic rolls into this sauce should be a must but as we had a lot to taste, dunking was severely restricted (on this occasion at least)

An arugula-based salad was a perfect way to cleanse and cool the palate and the blend of baby arugula, grapes and scallions had the masterly additional touch of some fresh mango and toasted almonds. The orange ginger vinaigrette dressing was not only a perfect complement but it had been correctly applied to just coat the leaves. This was definitely one of our favorite salads, my wife opined that she could probably live happily on it!

Pasta lovers need not fear, the subtle menu changes have done nothing to minimize the range of wonderful pasta dishes. We chose to taste the roasted vegetable ravioli, which was first class, and the wild mushroom ravioli, which was absolutely incredible, and I am not really a pasta person. The depth of taste and flavor combined with the delicate fresh homemade pasta made us understand why this dish is listed as MaryJane's favorite. Thankfully, Ken was very cooperative in sending us small (relatively) portions to enable us to make a wide survey so the three fish offering of tilapia, a superb sea scallop and the fish of the day, fresh white Atlantic halibut in a puttanesca sauce was very evocative of Mediterranean cooking at its best, although, from a personal taste, I would have enjoyed a little more of that anchovy flavor so inimicable to a puttanesca sauce.

Finally we tasted a morsel of some great spice rubbed lamb chops finished with an inventive fresh mango salsa, which made us wish that we had room for more but we had to move on to the sweet key lime pie which is one of the best sellers here and the high quality of the meal was amply upheld here and we also enjoyed some of the best espresso coffee outside of Italy, very digestive and refreshing.

MaryJane's offers two pricing levels for most dishes depending on the number of servings. The lower price will often prove enough for two and the higher for three or four. Don't be afraid to ask your server for advice. This is a restaurant where the word 'serve' really does mean 'to meet your needs and to satisfy' and not to intimidate or ignore!

Appetizers and soups range from $3 to $10; Main courses and pastas from $17 to $27 and desserts from $4 to $5

MaryJane has put so much of her own personality into this charming restaurant that offers some of the best value eating on Long Island. The combination of charming atmosphere and friendliness is matched by an imaginative menu that has really gone up a notch or two recently even from its already high level. A wonderful place for a drop in meal or for a planned celebration of birthday or anniversary or for a romantic evening, especially at the weekends when there is music to listen and dance to.

Dining In The Hamptons

Side Dish By Aji Jones

As many of us know, eating out in the Hamptons can really lighten the old wallet. So why not try to make your favorite chef's creations at home once in a while. Bogo's Food Spa in East Hampton is now hosting a cooking series featuring demonstrations from many notable East End chefs. The series is running throughout August with presentations scheduled for Thursday evenings and/or Saturday mornings. This Thursday August 21st from 4 – 6 p.m. check out Molly Harding, the pastry chef at the Maidstone Arms. The series is free and open to the public. Come and watch as Harding conducts her demonstration, creating ice creams, sorbets and iced nut creams with seasonal organic produce and foodstuffs from Bogo's. For further information call 329-1004.

James Lane Café in East Hampton is now offering a great deal for hungry patrons. Present one of the Endless Summer gift certificates found in these pages and you can get $20 off your total check. The promotion is valid Sunday through Thursday on the purchase of any two entrees. Call 324-7100 for details.

If you're planning on dining a little further west check out Se7en Bar & Grill in Westhampton Beach. Serving gourmet pub style cuisine, Se7en offers two for one entrées for $13.95 every Thursday, with a daily happy hour from 3 to 8 p.m. Se7en also has a nightclub that opens at 10 on Fridays and Saturdays. For table reservations call 288-7727.

The 2003 Zagat calls Gin Lane Restaurant and Lounge (726-7585) "a great new addition to the Hampton scene." Serving dinner seven days a week beginning at 5 p.m., Gin Lane also has live entertainment performing on the weekends in the lounge area. This cozy space is also available for private parties.

Snowflake is now open. Located right off 27 in East Hampton, Snowflake serves fried chicken, french fries, salads, wraps, kabobs, and burgers made with organic beef. Plus, they offer a huge selection of ice cream, fat free ice cream, and frozen yogurt. Call 329-7867 to order food for pick up or just swing by. Snowflake is open nightly.

There is a lot going on over at Indian Cove in Hampton Bays. This waterfront eatery (located on the Shinnecock Canal) has a prix fixe available every night for $22.75. If you're a seafood lover you wont want to miss the Monday through Thursday 1 1/4 lb lobster special for $17.75, or the Seafood Festival offered on Saturdays until 5 p.m. and Sundays until closing. During the festival promotion, hungry patrons receive lobster, mussels, clams, and shrimp with choice of soup or salad as well as a free glass of Stella Artois Beer, all for $22.75. Drink specials are also available on weekends. Call 728-5366 for particulars.

East Hampton Point (329-2800) located on Three Mile Harbor Road offers two separate waterside restaurants for your dining pleasure - one is upscale, the other is more casual. Stop in for lunch or dinner seven days a week, or come in on Sunday for brunch. The Point also offers a prix fix nightly from 5 to 6 p.m. for $29.

The Dish Hears That . . . Shock jock Howard Stern took his lady for an intimate dinner for two at Pacific East in Amagansett recently where they dined on Japanese black cod and tuna . . . Citarella regular, comedian Mel Brooks, was spotted stocking up on a selection of cheeses and organic produce . . . Super model Christy Brinkley perused the aisles at Bogo's Food Spa in East Hampton nabbing an assortment of organic goodies . . . "The Producers" returnee, Nathan Lane, stopped in to Babettes in East Hampton for lunch with a friend -- he washed down the cornmeal crusted chicken salad with a two berry smoothies . . . Former New York State governor, Mario Cuomo, dined recently at Tierra Mar . . . Democratic presidential hopeful, Dick Gephardt, stopped by Captain Phil's East End Clambake in Southampton for lobster rolls to go!

TOM VALENTI'S HAMPTON RECIPE OF THE WEEK

COUNTRY STYLE FRITTATA

Serves 4

10 eggs
1/3 cup MacNut™ Oil
1/2 Spanish onion, minced
1 green zucchini, cut into 1 inch cubes
1 yellow zucchini, cut into 1 inch cubes
1 dozen button mushrooms, quartered
6 ounces goat cheese
2 tablespoons fresh chopped basil
1/2 cup water
salt
pepper

Preheat the oven to 350°F. Heat oil over medium heat in a large non-stick skillet; add the onion and sauté for two minutes until tender. Add the remaining ingredients up to the goat cheese, season lightly with salt and pepper and sauté gently. Meanwhile, break the eggs into a bowl and add the water. Beat until fluffy and then stir in the basil and lightly season with salt and pepper. Pour the egg mixture over the vegetables, reduce the flame to low and take the goat cheese and break into pieces and distribute evenly over the egg mixture. Transfer the frittata into the oven and bake for 15 to 18 minutes or until the center is set. Jiggle the pan and make sure it is not sticking and invert onto serving dish. Allow to cool slightly and serve. This is also great as a lunch dish served with a small green salad seasoned with MacNut™ Oil, salt, pepper, and some freshly grated parmesan cheese.

TOM VALENTI IS CHEF & OWNER OF OUEST, NYC.

MACNUT™ OIL IS AVAILABLE AT SECOND NATURE MARKETS (EAST HAMPTON AND SOUTHAMPTON), BAREFOOT CONTESSA (EAST HAMPTON), WESTHAMPTON NATURAL FOODS, CITARELLA (ALL LOCATIONS), GRACE'S MARKETPLACE, HEALTH NUTS, GOURMET GARAGE AND ZABAR'S (NYC).

Dining In The Hamptons

JEFF & EDDY'S SEAFOOD

23 Main Street , Sag Harbor
631-725-1774

Newcomer Jeff & Eddy's Seafood Restaurant and Oyster Bar in Sag Harbor, is a gleaming krugerrand in the treasure chest known as the Hamptons dining scene. Why has it taken so long for the wharf community of Sag Harbor to become home to such an outstanding seafood restaurant and market? It certainly seems like an obvious match – and no one could have filled those galoshes better than owner Jeff Resnick of Sen fame.

Reminiscent of New York City's yesteryear establishments such as Grand Central Terminal's Oyster Bar or Oscars Seafood Restaurant, the ambiance is a winner! It is at once old-fashioned yet clean and modern, unpretentious, yet clearly happening. From the original tin ceiling to the teak wood plank sawdust floors to the sparkling white subway tiles that line the walls, each comfy booth offers the perfect setting to embark on your ocean-minded culinary indulgence.

The eye-catching teak wood custom made U-shaped bar is smack in the center. Lively and chic, it is the perfect spot for a glass of Veuve and a dozen malpeagues. What a way to unwind!

To begin, executive chef Justin S. Levine prepared combination seafood platter, (market price) the likes of which I have only seen at Le Coupole on Boulevard Montparnasse in Paris. Served traditionally on a gleaming steel tower and teaming with lobster, shrimp, oysters and clams, this is a raw bar-lover's dream come true. The fried whole belly clams ($9.75) and the cornmeal-crusted oysters (6 for $9.95) go down easy. Like the saying goes, bet you can't eat just one! The crab cakes ($12) are served with fresh mango. Not over-breaded or deep-fried, they are lumpy and savory (and sweet)! The South Fork fish chowder ($5) is a welcome departure from the more expected New England clam chowder ($5), which also happened to be thick and delicious. The steamers ($11.50), although a bit sandy, are served pure and simple in a natural broth with butter and herbs.

A house specialty and menu favorite, the baked Boston scrod ($16) is a winner with its dense crust of diced tomatoes and Provencal breadcrumbs. The mixed grilled seafood skewers ($18) another specialty of the house, were a perfectly balanced selection of fresh swordfish, tuna and salmon served on a fragrant bed of jasmine rice. For the carnivores in your party, the chef's Gorgonzola steak ($32) is tender and juicy and literally smothered in melted Gorgonzola. The sides of fresh local corn ($3.75) and creamed spinach ($4.50) are on my not-to-be-missed list. There is also a selection of sandwiches served from 12-3 p.m. such as an Oyster po'boy ($11.50) and a shrimp salad on Tuscan peasant bread ($9.50). I must go back during the daylight hours!

. A variety of desserts offer a delightful finish, but with the ample portions and numerous dishes that are too hard to pass up, saving room is no easy feat.

The wine list is concise, well chosen and reasonably priced.

Four starfish for Jeff & Eddy's Restaurant. Don't miss this seafood smorgasbord! Reservations are suggested.

Confessions of a RESTAURATEUR

By Fred Lieberman

I submitted this story to Dan Rattiner last year. He turned it down saying: "It's too long. I don't give myself this much space." "But did you like it?" I pleaded. "I don't know" said HE, "it's too long." Finally I made him read it. He read it. He liked it. He told me to edit it into three parts. Below is part one of a three part story as we approach its one year anniversary

I'm probably gonna get in trouble for this. Then again my Mother told me I was trouble waiting to happen since before I was born. Think about that one. This story deals with a serious set of events; the results of which have prompted me to make a life altering decision. This story is about my wife, myself, my two boys, my restaurant and LIPA.

It all began (or rather, I suppose, ended) on Saturday, August 17, 2002, at precisely 6:39 pm. I had dozed off in my apartment in a barn in the rear of my restaurant. I think I had a smile on my face as I mused about Andrew, age 11, and Matthew, age 7, my boys, having just begun "color war" at Camp Skylemar in Maine, that same afternoon.

If you've ever gone to camp then you have an idea as to how important Color War can be. If you've never gone to camp, color war is a competition, held at the end of summer, amongst campers and counselors whereby the entire camp is chosen for one side or the other, usually adopting the colors of the camp as their "Team Colors." In terms of my own camp experiences, color war was simply: Green & Grey. Campers compete in most sports as well as songs, cheers, decorations, and costumes. It usually lasts from three to five days.

Depending on the camp, color war can be very intense and competitive. So intense and competitive that fights break out amongst good friends, blood and sweat are spilled everywhere and, at the end, if you lost you were often sickeningly depressed and if you won, were equally elated. Fond memories and deep, deep friendships all around though.

I remember this boy, Richie Gerber, a good friend at Camp Orinsekwa – my camp for thirteen years. When I was 11 and he was 12 he punched me in the eye as I rounded second base after a "walk-off" double to win the Green & Grey junior softball game. The last thing I remember was raising my arms with fists pumping in total celebration. The lights went out; Richie said simply he couldn't help himself. Couldn't stand the fact that I was so happy. Didn't know how else to express his utter distress as my team snatched victory from the jaws of defeat. The lesson? Don't show off like that – especially in front of Richie Gerber.

Back to my apartment. At 6:39 I was abruptly aroused by what seemed a loud "thud." Although it was still very bright outside I could tell that it would have been total darkness had it been 9:39 instead of 6:39. My clock radio red light was out, the TV was off, the night light was off as well. In short, all of the apartment lights were out. It didn't take but a split second to realize I had no power. I grabbed my cell phone and dialed Galo in the kitchen of the restaurant. Before the phone could ring Galo was at my door: "Mr. Fred, the power is out again in the restaurant." The word "again" reverberated; the Richter Scale registering in my head loud and clear. You see, this was the third power outage this summer and the eighth or ninth in the five years I had been in business. Almost always it was on a Saturday evening. Incredible!

I jumped into my car to do a fast ride around to see just how extensive the blackout was. I was discouraged to learn that CVS to the West had lights, as did Brent's to the East. A bad sign. A bad sign because I learned from prior experience that a blackout this "contained" could get lost in the LIPA shuffle and it might be 24 hours before they would respond.

I screamed at the top of my lungs: "I hate this company. I hate this freakin company." I had been looking forward to my first really huge night of business since last Labor Day! Instead I pictured myself having to turn away hundreds of people, never again to recoup that lost business. There were already 75 people in the restaurant and it was just past 6:30. A really giant knot formed in my stomach as I pulled my jeep back in front of my apartment. I screamed in the direction of Galo: "I hate LIPA."

Now the real saga behind this story began at 5:40 in the afternoon on a balmy July Saturday. The year was 1998. 65 people stood in my bar room waiting for a surprise party to begin at 6:00 p.m. Thud! At 5:41 the lights went out. In a panic (there's that word again) I jumped in my car. "Where are you going" asked my panic stricken wife. I told her I didn't know but sitting in this spot was going to do me no good. I sensed real trouble. I headed West towards LIPA in Bridgehampton. This was the beginning of only my second year in business and I had no clue as to what was going on.

As I drove towards LIPA I remember thinking about my house in Amagansett. For years I used to take note that for seemingly no logical reason at all – like every time it got cloudy in Greenwich, or my cat farted – the lights in my house would go out. Usually for only a minute or two but sometimes longer. It was an annoyance. It seemed every time we came from the city on Friday the stove clock told the wrong time. I was paying about $109.62 a month to LILCO so what could I do? Nothing.

I reached the bowling alley in East Hampton and spotted a large yellow LIPA truck heading in the opposite direction. Not thinking clearly, I jammed on my brakes and did a skidding U-turn right in the middle of Montauk highway (kind of like the chase in the French Connection) thankful I had avoided an accident. I followed the LIPA truck as he turned left in front of the Red Horse Market. Two blocks later I sped in front of him and made him stop. He was not happy but neither was I. I told him my tale of woe and after he called his dispatcher he agreed to come to the restaurant. "You're lucky, there's no one with an emergency." What the hell is my situation?

"I'll follow you" he intoned. "No, I'll follow you!" I didn't want him out of my sight.

Fifty yards from the restaurant I was hugging the rear of his truck so closely that my wife, standing on the front lawn and waving frantically to flag him down herself, didn't see me on his tail. When she did, she broke into a huge smile and said to herself, "That's my boy." It's nice to be good at something. The driver made a left just past the restaurant on the side of the Suffolk County Bank. Believe it or not, it was 6:17. By 6:19 he had my lights back on as he was able to temporarily do something to a faulty transformer until he returned several hours later. The party went off on time. The LIPA guy was great and, needless to say, he saved our butts, even though my insides were still killing me.

Beginning August 19, Mia Farrow, Billy Dee Williams, and Montel Williams will appear in the critically acclaimed Off-Broadway hit The Exonerated. Directed by Bob Balaban, the show makes its Long Island premiere and will run for one week only, until August 24, at the John Drew Theatre at Guild Hall in East Hampton. So hurry up and get your tickets now.

The focus of the play follows the experiences of six former prisoners that spent anywhere from 2 to 22 years on death row, and were afterward deemed innocent and eventually freed by the state. Written by Jessica Blank and Erik Jensen, the play is inspired by interviews with 40 people that were conducted by the playwrights during the summer of 2000. Although a young play, it has already been the recipient of the Drama Desk Award for Unique Theatrical Experience, the Outer Critics Circle Award for Outstanding Off-Broadway Play, and the Lucille Lortel Award for Unique Theatrical Experience.

In addition to witnessing an extraordinary play, with an equally exciting cast, audience members will also be treated to a special presentation by Kerry Max Cook. Cook was one of the exonerated. He spent 22 years in prison for a crime that he did not commit. His experience made him the longest tenured death-row inmate in US history to be freed. Cook's appearance after the conclusion of the play will truly add to the moving performance.

Tickets are $50 for Tuesday through Thursday, and $60 Friday through Sunday. Call 324-4050.

SATURDAY, 16

SAINT-SAENS AT SUNSET BENEFIT– The Eos Orchestra will celebrate the summer with a cocktail reception and a performance of Saint-Saens' Carnival of the Animals with a surprise narrator at Lisa and Richard Perry's home. Reception begins at 6:30 p.m. and concert begins at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $500 for donors and $250 for general. Proceeds

DAN'S FASHION

A Handbag For All Occassions

Although her individual creations are endlessly inventive and varied, there is definitely Julie Feldman "look." Whether hand-decorated with flowers or made from leather and fabric, no matter how much the palette may change with the season, Julie's bags are famous for being original, delicately feminine and memorable beautiful.

As a designer, Julie began creating one-of-a-kind wardrobe pieces and accessory items ranging from hand-ornamented shoes to jewelry, hats and hair accessories for entertainers, celebrities and motion pictures. Shortly after showing her welded copper roses at Neiman's for Mothers Day 1998, Julie was inspired to create works that would enable women to carry beautiful and useful works of art with them every day. Awed by the innocent beauty of baby roses, Julie created her signature line, beautiful evening bags adorned with hundreds of tiny fabric roses. So successful were those original purses, they have been joined by dozens of other series and have turned evening and day bags, briefcases, totes, slippers and accessories into a gallery of wearable sculptures.

Working with welded steel, she created sculptures that now grace the homes of many private collectors in Southern California and have appeared in such public spaces as Neiman Marcus, Beverly Hills. Her minimalist sculptures and vivid paintings are frequenting among the most prized pieces at art auctions and charity events at such locales as the Museum of Contemporary Art and the Los Angeles County Museum. Julie has incorporated her love of the written word into her oil paintings and "Love Ladder" sculptures. Mirroring the relationship between fine art and design, Julie invented the "Greeting Bag" collection. Its magic includes a variety of shapes and sizes that bring touching "Sayings," Wishes" and "Letters" to their recipients. Ranging from a "Letter to a Daughter" and..."to a Best Friend" through a special "Birthday Wish" to thoughts on such topics as "Love", "Faith" and "Friendship", these delicate works of art are finding a place among people's prized momentos.

Recently, with the savvy professional in mid, Julie has conceptualized a unique and sophisticated series of day-into-evening "Envelope" and "Portfolio" handbags that break the boundaries of 9 to 5 conventions.

Julie's handbags and accessories are available at fine stores, boutiques and museum shops and are worn by celebrities such as Halle Berry, Hilary Clinton, Mia Farrow, Tatum O'Neal, Celine Dion, Sharon Stone and Caroline Rhea to name a few. They are also available in the Hamptons at: Gayle Willson Gallery, Southampton, Shoe-Inn, East Hampton (Fall Animal Collection), Renaissance, Southampton, (Marcia Collection).

For more information you can contact Julie Feldman Designs, 310-998-9148.

Shop 'til You Drop.....With Maria Tennariello

We got by this weekend without rain...Hopefully, this entire week will be sunshine, sunshine, sunshine...My family is coming out Wednesday through Monday, and my mom and sister bring the sunshine with them all the time! Let's do some sunny shopping!

The moment I stepped onto the porch at Out of The Closet on Madison Street in Sag Harbor, I realized Lucy was having her "Porch Sale." She has enclosed her porch and it is packed with great vintage pieces to die for. Everything from dresses from the 20s through the 70s. Vintage dead stock shoes, boots, hats, nightgowns, slips and fabulous vintage coats that will be a cool 50% off. The porch sale is an ongoing sale that will be added to every day, and will be known as the "Sale Porch" from now on...Lucy has expanded her Victorian and Edwardian section in the shop and has added lots of hot furs along with a great selection of signed costume jewelry and antique silver. You gotta go there!

On Noyac Road in Sag Harbor, you must step into Local Honey now to check out their trendy and offbeat clothing for the entire family. Look for their huge "End of Summer" sale with 40% to 60% off men's, women's and children's selected merchandise, and 25% off beach equipment. Now is the time to get those extras for last minute guests that need a beach chair or raft or whatever. You know what I mean! This shop is open Thursday through Monday, closed Tuesday and Wednesday...Cute shop!

Donna Parker, Habitat Ltd. Antiques on Montauk Highway in Water Mill is having a "Storewide Summer" sale right now! Their large collection of 18th, 19th and 20th century French, Italian and Scandinavian antiques are being reduced 25% to 50%. Now is an opportunity to obtain some truly magnificent pieces. Open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday 'til 6 p.m. and Sunday 'til 5 p.m.

Touche on Main Street in Southampton is having a "Summer Sale" on dresses, capris, pants, skirts, tops and shoes at 25% to 50% off. Open ever day, so hop on over...

Top secret information on The Secret Closet...on Jobs Lane in Southampton is everything at the store is on sale...Yes it is indeed. Swimsuits, coverups, dresses, tops and bottoms are 30% to 50% off. Prices regularly $110 to $200 are now $49 to $99.

Have you seen the Creations by Terrilynn wineglasses, accessories and more yet? If you haven't you should! Terrilynn was inspired by her surroundings in the wine country of the East End so she turned them into a work of art. Her most popular glasses are the crystal stemware with handpainted "Red Grapes" (which I have and love), or the "Green Grapes" that make every wine lover sing. Also, in the crystal line are her stunning "Jewel Martini" glasses that have jewel colors that appear to be floating in your Martini...I especially love her summer fun collection of "Baja Margarita" which includes a Margarita pitcher and six glasses and a salt dish all hand painted with a summer festive look. These creations can be found at Duck Walk Vineyards in Southampton, Savannah Gifts in Baiting Hollow and Showcase Wines and Liquors on the North Road in Southold. Also, from August 16 and 17, they will be at the 4th Annual Fruits of the Region Festival Castello di Borghese Vineyard and Winery in Cutchogue. Go for it!

At the Ann Kolb Gallery on Main Street in East Hampton all the standard "Sticks" mirrors; small, medium and large are 10% off...Love the fun mirrors. You can put them in any room in the house...

The Hampton Coffee Company has expanded into East Hampton its new espresso bar and café is located in the former Brown Bag on Main Street, next to the East Hampton movie theater. The new store features everything the Water Mill store is famous for, including their own blends of locally roasted estate grown coffees plus muffins, croissants, scones and cookies baked on premise each morning, but in a small to-go-only format. The store will be featuring fresh fruit smoothies, Sedutto premium ice cream "Only 7" non-fat frozen yogurt, homemade crepes, made-to order sandwiches, wraps, homemade soups and vegetarian chili, plus a fresh salad bar. Place an order in advance call 329-8900. Yay!

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Summer Shopping!

If you know of, or are having any sales and would like to share them with me, or have any questions regarding the shops or sales, please email me at shoptil@danspapers.com or fax me at: 631-537-3330. I'd love to hear from you...

DAN'S FASHION

Get Dressed In Classic, Comfy, Casuals And Go!!!

Comfort and ease, movement and stretch, the feeling of being cozy and secure. Eileen Fisher's goal is to live simply. That includes getting dressed...The idea is, you just put your clothes on and go without fuss, you shouldn't think about them al day, you're just ready to do what you need to do...

In 1984, Eileen Fisher designed and introduced four basic pieces at the boutique show in New York City, where she received $3,000 in orders. At her second show, three months later, she expanded the line to eight pieces and brought in $40,000 in orders. Hence, Eileen Fisher Inc. was born.

The original concept – high quality, simple comfortable women's clothing that works as a 'wardrobing concept", still defines the evolving line that now fills twenty-eight Eileen Fisher stores and is sold in department and specialty stores across the United States and Canada.

Her wardrobe concept is a line that is designed to work together over the entire season. Core fabrics, shapes and colors work together within a delivery and across a season to expand wardrobe possibilities. Core fabrics satisfy more than one end use: work, play, and occasion.

The color concept is choreography of color reflects shift from summer to winter:

July-August: Neutrals signals fall, but have a lighter feeling. Wear now colors make the transition from summer to fall.

September: Move into deep, rich neutrals, the lush surprise of color: deep fall.

October: Late in the season, shift to soft neutrals and powdery color: winter. Everyday Eileen is an evolution/expansion of spa wear. Introducing full fashion stretch cotton spa wear, Eileen's passion fabric is washable stretch crepe in new styles with the yoke waist. It crosses categories from morning Yoga to an evening out on the town. Her vests and jackets take spa wear and core fabrics onto the street.

Going to work there are two new directions. A new woven opportunity, elegant fluid wool challis in a transeasonal weight that interprets for work and occasion. And a silk knit dressing in pieces that shape the body: polished, resilient Tussah silk stretch that crosses over to occasion.

Occasion is the ovulation/expansion of silk matte jersey: elegant stretch in silk; fluid, washable and packable, ready for anything. Eileen's double layer pans, skirts, dresses skim the body but don't cling. The raw hem is clean and modern, the wardrobe with sort, shaped sweaters; layer with sheer pieces. The evolution of sheer is style that expands to include double layer tops and bottoms. Her interpretation of lace; feminine trims, lacey sheer in knit drivers.

Her silk georgette expands the essentials. The classic shirt and kimono jacket are now essentials. The sweep of dancer dress modified is modern and versatile, not just for a special occasion. The silk sponge jacket is a textured driver and an Eileen Fisher classic; it completes the Georgette package.

The core bottoms are washable stretch crepe while the heavyweight rayon is a perfect fall weight, a polished stretch. The viscose wool knit is a structure of a woven and the comfort of a knit. It is clean and modern. The stretch cotton twill is the Eileen jean in two styles.

The essentials are brought forward so they are timeless and modern. There is washable wool crepe, new V-neck shells and shaped simple cardigans. Washable fine crepes in five styles that include Eileen's passion piece, the knee length tunic, slim shell, works under cropped cardigan or with a full pant and skirt, a modern silhouette. Her wardrobe is a subtle texture of fine crepe with flat knits and other foundation fabrics.

Eileen Fisher's mission and purpose is to inspire women to celebrate who they are and to create products that simplify life and nurture the spirit. Her product invites every woman to express her very own style and to produce only what we love. – Maria Tennariello

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

Great engines I've known and loved. What most people don't realize is that in all forms of transportation, the engine preceded the method of transport. Remember Fulton's Folly, the first steam-engine powered boat? The Wright brothers had to design their own lightweight engine to make their first flight. The original WW2 fighter plane, the P-51 Mustang, was fast, but it wasn't exceptional until it was fitted with a newly designed Rolls Royce Griffin V-12. Of course the invention of the jet engine changed the way airplanes performed, hence the way the world traveled.

Certain engines in automobiles have been important milestones. Here are some of my favorites. The Ferrari V-12. Let's face it, to know this engine is to love it. It's probably at the top of the list of most car enthusiasts of the world. The Ferrari engines that I most admire are the pre-fuel injection V-12s that had banks of Weber carburetors lined up between the cylinder heads. The engine was unusual in that it had two oil filters placed upright at the head of the cam covers in plain sight. The only easy part of servicing this beautifully designed engine was changing the oil. Then there was that sound. No other engine in the world sounds like a Ferrari V-12. Even the starting motor sounds different. You start a V-12 by turning the key to a notch, then pushing the key forward. The starting motor makes noises similar to that of a large radial engine starter. If you saw the film Flight of the Phoenix you'll know what I mean. You have to pump the gas pedal quite rapidly to get the engine to fire, because these early V-12s had no choke, only accelerator pumps. With twelve spark plugs sparking away Ferraris always started.

To give you an example of the dependability of a Ferrari, I used my '64 Ferrari as a daily driver to go skiing in Vermont. At twenty below zero it would start every morning. In fact, I used it to jump start dead batteries of my friends' cars. The Ferrari V-12 never let me down. That's one of the reasons Ferraris are world champion racecars. They simply don't break.

Another great engine with a unique sound is the Porsche six cylinder. When you hear one ripping through the gears, you just know from the sound that an air-cooled autobahn meister is in the neighborhood. Maybe I've been around too long, but like the early Ferraris, I prefer the sound of the early small-engine Porsches, especially the 2, 2.2, and 2.4 liter models of the early seventies. Because these early Porsche motors were much smaller than the current engines, they had a delicious mechanical sound very much like an expensive chain saw being revved. With less reciprocating mass, they revved like banshees. Speaking of high rpm, I owned a Porsche 910 racing prototype with a full-race two-liter factory engine. I was told by the factory that it was red-lined at 8,200 rpm. If I took it to 8,300 rpm, it would blow. Did I watch that tachometer!

In 1965 I drove one of the first Porsche 911s imported into America. I wasn't overly impressed with the car, mainly because of build quality compared to the earlier 356 model. However, the new six cylinder engine was a revelation when compared with the old VW derived Porsche four cylinder. I sensed Porsche's future would be based on this particular motor, and I was right.

Originally, the little six produced only 130 horsepower. Nobody, including the wizards at Porsche, ever could have imagined that this same basic engine would someday produce 900 horsepower in racecars and 400-500 horsepower in streetcars. It is engineering like this that has given Porsche its legendary reputation as a world leader in performance sports cars.

Two other great engines are the Chevrolet small block V-8 (although it has always amused me that a 5-liter engine is referred to as a small block), and the Ford 289 cubic inch V-8. Both have seen yeoman service in millions of passenger cars. Yet when called to active duty in the racetrack wars, both have beaten some of the world's best racecars. These American V-8s are easily modified to produce twice- to three-times

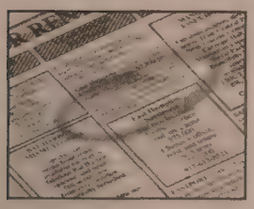
HOME FOR THE SUMMER... By David Lion Rattiner



My buddies Rick, Pete and I want to be roommates in the fall. We were hoping for on campus housing. The main problem with on campus housing, however, is that it is kind of hard to get. You need to fill out paper work on a certain day, send in a deposit, and have all of your friends that you want to live with fill out the same thing on the same day. You have to get social security numbers from all of your friends and fill that out as well. You also have to do all of this about one year in advance from getting your place. Last October, when the on campus forms were due, I called my two friends Pete and Rick. We had talked about living together.

"Hey Pete. Did you fill out the on campus housing forms?"

"Nope."

Click.

"Hey Rick. Did you fill out the on campus housing forms?"

"I was going to but I forgot."

Click.

Needless to say, we were not getting on-campus housing. Ten months went by. We still had not found a place. We hadn't even looked for one. Summer is going fast, school is coming, and all three of us (who by the way all of have great GPAs) had not even as much as picked up the telephone to call a real estate agent. Last weekend, however, I got on the phone and sounded the call to action.

Through a series of calculated cell phone calls, train schedules, plane schedules, and garage fees, we all met in Boston on Saturday to meet a realtor who would show us some places.

I got to Boston, met up with Pete and Rick, and headed out to the real estate agency. Within ten minutes we looked at two places.

"I like the second place. I think we should take it," I said.

"Me too, we probably won't find anything better," Pete said.

"These places go incredibly fast. You are lucky to have found it. I took it off the market for you because I know you guys are in a jam. Besides that apartment, there really is not anything else available around here in September. Everyone is coming back," our real estate agent said.

"I didn't really like it." Rick said.

Pete and I got a little angry. Here we were, less than one month away from going back to Boston and without a place, we finally find one, and Rick doesn't like it.

"Rick, if we do not take this place, we won't have a place. Everything is gone, the ones that aren't are out of our price range."

"Nothing is out of our price range," Rick declared.

We started to argue and negotiate. Rick wouldn't budge. I figured that if we looked some more and satisfied Rick that we were getting the best deal on the second apartment, he would likely come through and we would have a place to live. I looked over at the real estate agent.

"Is there anything else?"

"Not really. I took the one I just showed you off the market. I assumed you three would want it. The only other place we could check out is The Greenhouse, but that is kind of expensive."

"Give them a call."

He made the call and got a leasing agent. There was a place available for $3000 a month. Split three ways was $1000 a month, not so good. Rick did mention a pro rate, however. Maybe there would be a bigger bedroom or something. We took a walk.

The place was amazing. The building was clean, right near a mall, walking distance to campus, and it had a roof top pool.

"Oh my God dude, this place is awesome," I said.

"Let's take it," Rick said.

We pro-rated it, negotiated, and made the call to take it. The leasing agent showing us the place looked at us and said, "Just so you know, we are going to pay the agent fee and you are getting the second month free because we have been looking to sell this unit for a long time."

In other words, we were saving $6000 for the year. With the pro-rate, it was actually cheaper to take this place than the other one that was not as nice. It was like the universe was on our side. It was as if the planets lined up just right, timed perfectly, and got us this place. I was thanking the man upstairs.

"Gentlemen, it has been a pleasure apartment hunting with you," Rick said.

"I think the three of us have good karma or something. This really has worked out so great," Pete said.

I looked over at Pete and Rick and we high-fived and said, "Everything works out when you put your mind to it."

their production car horsepower. This American iron also has the unique distinction, unlike the Porsche motor, of being inexpensive to purchase and modify

Let's not forget that all great motors were not high performance engines. The original Volkswagen and Porsche had four cylinder engines that were wonders of dependability. The same can be said of the Citroen 2CV, and Fiat 500. These two little minimalist cars have the cutest 2-cylinder engines that run forever. Unfortunately, they both sound like Briggs and Stratton lawn mowers, which I find a turn off.

The older Chevy straight six cylinder, nicknamed "Stove Bolt Six," literally ran forever, and certainly the Ford Flathead V-8 is one of the greatest engines of all time. In fact, until the advent of the Porsche six in racing, the one engine that was in more racecars and had won more races than any other, was the Ford Flathead V-8.

There are many other great engine manufacturers, like Offenhauser, Bugatti and Mazda, with its revolutionary rotary powerplant. Let's save them for a future article. By the way, have you noticed that in most cars produced today, you can't even find, much less recognize, the engine.

HOMEGROWN ...BY BRIAN HALWEIL

Cultivating Art in Immigrant Vines

Any visitor to Channing Daughters winery will immediately grasp the intimacy between art and food. Soaring wood sculptures by Walter Channing dot the property. A larger-than-life pencil, carved from a tree trunk, stands several stories high. Nearby, a rescued tree trunk stands inverted: its crown in the ground and its roots in the wind.

Customers sometimes stroll through the gardens as they sip a recent purchase, and more than a few wineglasses have been thoughtlessly forgotten there. But the inclusion of art extends beyond the grounds for this boutique operation on Scuttle Hole Road in Bridgehampton.

"We're thoroughly artisinal, and somewhere between low-tech and no-tech," says Christopher Tracy, winemaker and chef of the smallest South Fork winery. "We harvest by hand, crush with feet, punch down with feet, and gravity bottle by hand."

As he speaks, he struggles to keep up with a rotating set of nozzles eager to squirt out wine. Chris dumps empty label-less, wine bottles onto a thick wood table, and then fits two bottles at a time onto nozzles, not unlike a dairyman hooking pumps to a cow's udder. Two assistants remove the full bottles.

"There are only nine of us," he explains, in a T-shirt, shorts and ponytail, looking more like part of the Dot Com exodus than a wine craftsman. "We all do a bit of everything."

The winery produces 5000 cases each year, while some of the larger Long Island operations crank out several times that amount. In turn, these 5000 cases are made up of a dozen lots of just a few hundred cases – and sometimes under one hundred cases – of specialty wines that tend to sell out quickly.

Chris says the smaller batches assure impeccable quality control, and encourage lots of experimentation. The winery, for instance, produced four chardonnays in 2001, using different combinations of stainless steel and oak barrels, grape varieties and harvest times, yeast selections, and filtration rates. "There is a time and a place for all these wines," Chris says, still juggling bottles.

"Place" can be a relative term. Two decades ago, when Channing started to plant the first vineyard on the South Fork, Larry Perrine, executive winemaker and part owner, sensed some likeness between the Bridgehampton climate and the renowned grape-growing district of Friuli in northeastern Italy.

Like the influence of the Adriatic on Friuli, several bodies of water – the Atlantic, the Peconic Bay, and the Sound – buffer eastern Long Island against temperature extremes. This means that the grapes can ripen gradually, and that Long Island hosts the warmest wine region this far north in the eastern United States.

Perrine imagined Pinot Grigio, Tocai Friulano (a distant cousin of Sauvignon Blanc), Dolcietto, Pinot Bianco, and other Italian transplants thriving in the humid, sun-filled Bridgehampton climate that mirrors their home turf. He also had a hunch that the wines would sell. (On Long Island, Channing Daughters is the exclusive producer of several of these varieties.)

Those hunches proved pleasantly successful. Phoebe Levin, who markets the wine to restaurants and dealers and often leads people through tastings from behind the estate's bar, says that the Tocai is the current "wow" wine. "People haven't usually tasted something like this," she says, detecting hints of pink peppercorn in the unexpected white. (The winery offers tastings everyday from 11 to 6.)

The same small scale that allows Channing Daughters to treat their wine like art also means they need to think different about selling wine.

"More and more, our wines go exclusively to the wine club," says Phoebe.

The wine club is something of an innovation for East End vineyards, but, from a marketing perspective, it is a logical extensive for an operation like Channing Daughters. Although Channing Daughter wines have infiltrated more than a handful of top restaurants in Long Island and New York City, the vineyard doesn't have the volume or advertising budget to compete in the mass market.

So the vineyard cultivates an intimate relationship with its best customers. Every other month club members receive two different bottles of wine – before they even hit the tasting rooms – accompanied by a detailed write-up on these new releases. (The next installation includes the 2002 Vino Bianco, a complex, super Friulian white that combines Sauvignon, Tocai, Chardonnay, and Pinot Grigio, and the 2001 Brick Kiln Chardonnay.) The price – which ranges from $14 to $40 per bottle – is deducted from the member's credit card. Members also get first dibs at ordering additional bottles, reduced rates to winery events.

"Our wine and cheese events are like continuing education classes for wine drinkers," Chris, the winemaker, says. "We try to improve the knowledge base of our customers, and it pushes us to make better wine."

About Gardening....with Annette

Don't Wait To Sell To Start Curb Appeal

Gardening for curb appeal doesn't have to be fancy to be effective. Even if your gardening experience is limited to planting a few of four-packs of petunias every spring, you can freshen up the appearance of your house by making a few simple changes. Lots of people would like to improve the curb appeal of their homes, but they're not sure where to start. There are many schools which offer mini courses in design and landscaping and some make field trips to your house taking turns with the other students. Or gardeners bring snapshots of their yard to the classes and a garden designer is on hand to help you with ideas to make your landscaping more interesting and colorful.

The front entrance is usually stressed as the focal point. You can draw attention to the front door with landscaping, then build out along the front walk. Overgrown shrubs are typical around homes more than 10 to 15 yrs. old. These shrubs may have been planted by a builder who was required to plant across the front of the house, but who didn't give much thought to the shrubs' mature size. After 10 years, they may crowd the entrance and block windows.

Old hollies and junipers or other evergreens can sometimes be brought back into scale with the house by careful pruning, but taking them out is often the smartest choice. The newer hybrids are so much better. Junipers, barberries, hollies and other shrubs introduced in the past 10-15 years are more draught tolerant and disease resistant than old varieties. And they are more compact; they won't outgrow their places.

Shrubs with columnar forms are great for either side of the front walk near the door and lower growing shrubs for the rest of the landscaping out front. It's more interesting to have a variety of forms and the columnar shapes distinguish the entrance. Small beds for annuals or perennial flowers near the door and in front of evergreens are so appealing. Posts of flowers on the porch or the front stairs will bring the colors of your garden right up to the house.

The front yard is not the place to experiment with trees and shrubs that may not be hardy in your area. Research the plants and use the proper plants in the proper locations. The staff of a good garden center can usually make appropriate recommendations, but they'll need to know whether your planting area gets morning or afternoon sun, or it the location is shady all day. Amending the soil before you plant is a good idea as well, and local county extensions can help here. Many of them do soil testing or you can pick up a kit at your local home center.

Everyone wants low maintenance, but to be perfectly honest, there is really no such thing. Everything has it's needs. Some require less care, but there's always something you need to do. Water during dry spells, pinch flowers off as they fade, and prune judiciously once or twice a year to shape plants gently. You'll get to know your plants as you take care of them and they will look better and bloom longer and more lushly than neglected plants.

A few small changes make a big difference in the appearance of your home.. whether you are selling or not. You need to do all the stuff you've been talking about doing and never get around to it. If you wait until you sell your to put of pot of petunias by the front stairs or plant a handsome hydrangea next to the porch, you'll miss all the fun. And it is fun. Try it!

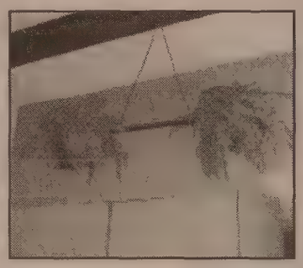
Coordinating Potted Patio Plants

When you think of potting plants for your deck, patio or mounds under trees, what comes to mind first? Do you think of the colors, sizes or texture? There are so many planting combinations that it would take three of Dan's Papers to really explain them all. But there are some basic "to-do's" that should be applied to get a professional look or that French bouquet style.



Pot colors should also be considered. If you are using soft pinks, grays and whites, a pale pot perhaps in a shade of gray would be perfect. Hot colors such as reds and oranges, mixed with some paler greens go well in terra-cotta. Whatever your choice, determine carefully the exposure they will get.

If you have a porch area that is semi-dark, you may want to stick with plantings such as white geraniums, or some Surfina white petunias mixed in with some Ipomoea "Margarita" to break up the dark areas. In the evening, when you have a light on, it picks up its glow.

Some winning combinations are a range of purple and lavender shades accented by clean white. A combo of Lantana "White Lightening" and Scaevola "New Wonder" plus Petunia Surfina "Blue Veined" and Strobilanthes Dyerianus are gorgeous!

A terra-cotta pot filled with different shades of Coleus, like "Tobasco" and "Rustic Orange," plus some fuchsia "Gartenmeister Bonstedt" make a great planting for under trees. Coleus likes shady to dappled sunlit areas.

For a pastel patio combination try a large pot filled with lavender and purple Heliotropeum "Fragrant Delight," lilac-pink Verbena Tenuisecta "Edith" and variegated Helichrysum petiorlare.

There is a simply outstanding plant, Strobilanthes or Persian Shield. It's a 6-8 inch long, finely toothed leaves are dark bronze-green overlaid with a purplish pink and frosted silver. The effect of a mature plant is so impressive and it can grow 3 feet tall and just as wide. Paired up with a paler green trailing plant, such as a Plectranthus, it makes for one happy planting!

Orange zinnias planted with Ipomoea Margarita makes a lively contrast as well. The effect of the orange and lime green is a show stopper. I had this planted last year in a little wagon and it held up until Halloween, the colors were perfect for the fall as well.

When you are shopping for your plants at a respected nursery, take along swatches of your favorite color combinations. Your blues and pinks, purples, pinks and lavenders, your reds and yellows, and oranges and greens. Plan ahead and you will have the most curb appealing plants in your neighborhood.

Back To School (grin)

It's that time again and it seems almost as good as Christmas. Back to School. No more sleeping until noon and staying up way past midnight, what is with this Circadian clock and teens? I could shine a light right into my teens sleepy eyes in the morning and know for a fact it will not get through that pupil. No pun intended. Well, she'll have to snap out of it soon, August 20 starts tennis varsity and she'll have to be on the courts at 8 am. Propped up, I'm sure, but nonetheless, on the courts.

Looking at an AOL ad here for phones for teens. They do so much now as well as make a simple phone call. Play games, take photos, make sounds, blink, radiate. What next. But if you are looking for a real simple plan for your kids, one that will control all those phone calls that will cost you a fortune in bills, try the Cingular plan. If your teen doesn't go too far and you really just want them to use it to pick them up from the movies or mall, or make a quick call, this is the one. No yearly contracts, no monthly bills. You load in the minutes by credit card as you need to and there is roll over. In other words, you aren't going to lose those minutes you don't use. It lets you know when you are getting low, so a simple phone call and you are back in business. Of course, you can track your time whenever you want.

My father received a phone for Christmas and he promptly lost all his time by trying to figure it out. All minutes were lost. Then we found out that if you put money on the account and you haven't used it up at the end of a certain amount of time, usually a little more than a month, that's it. You have lost it and you have to pay for more. This was an AT&T wireless Go phone and plan. What a waste! Ok, no contracts, but you are paying for that if you don't use it wisely.

We find the Cingular perfect. Your teen can play games, send text messages, adjust it to obnoxious rings, all the things the big boys do, except rack up a huge bill and endless contract. It's the Cingular Keep In Contact plan. Go to www.cingular.com.

Also for your little ones, there is the FaceGraces Tattoos. Instead of making that phone call, there is a harmless removable tattoo that you put on you face, arm, wherever, to get your message across. Well, not yours.. theirs. These are temporary tattoos that use color and location to create a 'secret language' communicating over 26,000 messages to anyone who knows the simple code. In other words, the whole group of friends your child has, needs to have this kit. Colorful little icons can grace the face of your daughter and hopefully you have the code figured. Contact Dave at dave@facegraces for ordering this innovative little system.

When you go shopping for clothes for back to school, most specialty shops now give out incentive to come back by offering $20 if you spend $75 and such. This is so easy to do, by purchasing one or two items! Remember to ask for your little card at the Gap, American Eagle or other favorite shops. Forget Abercrombie & Fitch! This is a place you'll surely go for you lungs at and get nothing but grief and a skimpily dressed child in return. I have never seen a bunch of moms rolling their eyes all in one store. Sure, the transparent clothes are great, for who and what I am not sure, but for what price? Not only that, they have a new Sex Ed catalog that is so darn racy they have to keep it bound up in the stores so your kids won't peek. I don't get it, why is it necessary to sell, yes sell, this catalog of half naked young people? What is the point here? This is a store that canvases the mall looking for nice looking guys and gals to appy for a job. I find that sort of discriminating. Take a peek at www.abercrombie.com at one of the pages of the catalog. If you know what I am missing, email me. Let your kids buy their clothes there with their allowance or baby-sitting money. You'll be spending less time in there. I promise. I hope your kid is into layering these clothes!

So, in September, if all the normal things fail to get your child up, try taking her/his cell phone and placing it by their ear. Go to your phone and call them and I promise you. that will be the only thing that will get them up, circadian clock time or yours.

Summer Products

Too many plunges into the pool? Too much can make your hair prone to severe breakage and if that isn't enough, it can make it very brittle and dry. Try using a treatment with hair-strengthening protein to your daily ritual. Try Redken Extreme Anti-Snap leave in conditioner or Clairol Herbal Essences Intensive Blends Creme Leave-In. Somehow, by using the leave in conditioners, we have found that the hair responds much faster and better than your regular condition and rinse formulas. Infusiums Leave-In Conditioner is just as effective.

Using a product that contains iridiscent particles, lends a luminous sheen to your already tanned skin making it look a little more sleeker than it already is. There are a number of them on the shelves now, so you want to go take a peek what may be right for your skin type. They are usually over by the body moisturizers. Davidoff Cool Water Ocean Radiance is a fresh blend of aquatic and citrus notes, which is light and airy, not overpowering. Try several on for size.

Use a body scrub now to sloth off any dead skin that may be accumulating due to exposure to sun. Keeping your tan even is important and if you allow your skin to become dry, you may get patches of uneven color. Every day use a loofah or a soap containing some sort of granule, to remove this excess dry skin. Buffing is a daily must now. To even out flaky or ashy spots, use a gentle body scrub in the shower. Clarins Toning Body Polisher is a good one. Jergens Ash Relief Moisturizer or Vaseline Intensive Care Healthy Body Complexion Moisturizing Lotion are on the shelves also.

The newest weapon against unwanted hair are the soy protein ones. Soy protein found in Aveeno Positively Smooth Moisturizing Lotion and Avon Skin-So-Soft Fresh & Smooth Hair Mimimizing Lotion are the ones you should be using. Although the soy won't diminish hair growth, it does soften it and makes it appear far less noticible. Biore Hair Minimizing Daily Facial Moisturizer is another one you may want to employ as part of your daily cleansing routine.

Using bronzer powder on parts of your face that perhaps have faded are a sure way to even out your tan. It can be used year round to replace your blushes as well. Fake Bake's Bronzy Babe Powder gives a healthy look to fading tans. To pump up that tan, try using some tropical colors to offset it. Pinks, corals, tangerines are great ways to fake that tan up a bit. Save the darker shades for the fall when the berries come around.

And remember...keep blocking!

The Natural Beauty Farm

At Your Local Farmstand; the Latest Beauty Treatments

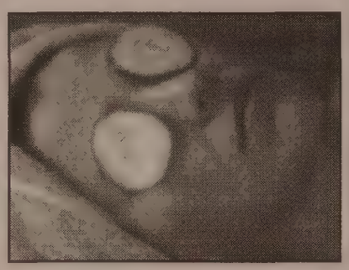
One a recent trip to the Fritz-Lewin Farmstand in Riverhead, an employee stood speechless after hearing the suggestion that her mother's homemade jam could be slathered on the face for a soothing beauty treatment.

Preserves to preserve your peau?

Pectin, the agent that is used to make jam thick, can act as a natural collagen treatment, firming and thickening the skin. In fact, strawberry, raspberry and peach jams, all with varying levels of acidity to balance out the PH in your skin, are particularly beneficial for your visage.

Think of the slumber party possibilities! 5 girls, gathered round, no men in sight, giving each other fruit facials.

If you know what to buy, the fresh-from-the-ground finds at your local farmstand can rival the latest beauty booty at Bendels. For instance, a treatment using potatoes works well for oily or acne-prone skin. Potatoes have moisture-stripping capabilities, leaving your face dry and tight. Purchase two fist-sized potatoes, either red or white, and cook them in water. Mash with a fork, and mix in two tablespoons of sour cream. Forget where you are (one room away from your husband), and what's on your face (food that's good with a burger), and relax for 15 minutes. Use twice a week.



Sound goofy to you? It is! Try it with your kids on a Saturday afternoon – they'll get a giggle at mommy as Mrs. Potato Head.

Nutrient-rich fruits and vegetables help with various skin conditions. If dry skin is your snag, head to the banana bunches. This potassium-heavy fruit can plump up thirsty skin, infusing moisture as needed. Choose a banana that is partly browning, because the riper the fruit is, the higher concentration of enzymes available to react with your skin. Mash one very ripe banana and apply to face for a soothing treatment.

Rose, a clarifying botanical, is used by beauty experts to eliminate redness from the skin. Try making this light toner at home: soak a heap of rose petals in distilled water for 3-4 days. Remove flowers from water and pour results into an air-tight glass bottle. Store a few days worth into a water bottle with a spritzer. The rose water keeps for up to a year, and can be used twice a day.

You can also buff your body with the following natural scrub: mix equal parts (about 1/4 cup) white sugar with grainy salt and add the juice of one lemon and a tablespoon of olive oil. The mixture should not be too liquid-heavy, just soft enough to scrub on your skin. Apply in the shower with a washcloth. Try adding some lavender, well-known for it's soothing properties, for a wonderful scent.

If you are wary about trying any of these treatments, there are many products on the market, refined by professionals, which tap into the healing powers of fruits and botanicals. A top-seller at Naturopathica in East Hampton is their pumpkin enzyme peel, great for dry, problem skin. This exfoliating mask that smells like the fall harvest takes the alpha hydroxy acid extract from pumpkin, which is gentler on your skin than chemical concoctions of alpha hydroxy. ($68 for 1.7 oz)

Why use fruits and plants for your skin treatments, rather than chemicals tested in labs, such as the acne-fighting benzoyl peroxide? "Your skin is natural, and fruits and vegetables are natural. The idea is that if something is kind to you internally, it's going to be kind to you externally," says Shawn from Naturopathica.

On a recent trip to Australia, I found Lush, a natural cosmetics company with products so fresh they come with expiration dates. The company, which was founded in the UK, has expanded seemingly everywhere but the US. They make yummy treatments for hair, face and body, including solid bar shampoos which are displayed like blocks of cheese in their storefronts. The Chamomile Lawn Shampoo (6.95, Canadian dollars) is fabulous for softening and brightening blond hair. The satisfaction of scrubbing your scalp with a chunk of marigold flowers and chamomile flakes provides a novel shower experience. (Mail order and online purchasing available at lushcanada.com.)

You can slather all of the natural remedies you want on your face, but maximum benefits will only be achieved through treating your body right on the inside, too. Each natural beauty advocate I spoke to stresses the importance paying attention to your internal systems, as well as your skin. Consult your doctor to ensure that your diet is healthy and complete.

The treatments suggested in this article are not for everyone. If you have very sensitive skin or allergies (skin or food), consult your doctor before trying these remedies.

Police Blotter

East End Police departments reported a myriad of crimes this past week. From traffic-violations to public self-humiliation, East enders kept cops on their toes.

In Bridgehampton, a Gap employee called police after a man that she had seen before violated her personal space. He emerged from the dressing room with his zipper down and, while attempting to pull her behind closed doors, asked her to zip it up. A week prior, the man had left her his name and number. Police are contacting the man.

In Southampton Village, another male/female quarrel ended in the arrest of the cowardly lion of the "jungle" we all know as east end traffic. During a dispute in the jungle, the 62-year-old New York City man struck the woman. Police arrested him for harassment in the second degree.

* * *

A Southampton woman called police a couple of weeks ago to report her car stolen. She said she had left the keys on top of one of the tires while it was parked in a Canal Road club's lot. But when she returned, the car was gone.

* * *

A series of signs were stolen from various Montauk locations this past week. In all, the sign situation surmounted in a $3,350 collaborative loss to Montauk sign owners.

* * *

A Springs School student was spotted by the school's head custodian tearin' it up on his minibike on one of the playing fields. The boy managed to damage the grass, but had sped off before police arrived.

A Sayre's Path woman has had $750 in damage done to her Ford Taurus, between two separate occasions, as it sat in her driveway this past week. The first incident occurred when a freak airborne squash smashed her taillight. A few nights later, she heard a loud pop, a man laughing and the screeching of tires, so she went to check it out. She discovered that the back window to her car was smashed. Police are investigating.

* * *

In Sagaponack, a Bridgehampton man lost his cell phone in a careless string of events while leaving Sagg Main Beach. He told police that he set his $80 Motorola on his car's roof and had forgotten about it. As he drove for about 10 minutes, he realized his goof and turned around. The phone was no where to be found.

* * *

Another phone fiasco was reported in Bridgehampton last week. A Mahopac, N.Y. man told police that he was having a slice of pizza when he realized his phone was gone. Police are investigating.

Dan's Letters

DUNE HAMPTON
Dear Dan,

Following are a lot of musings and speculations. They actually remind me of a marching song from when I was in the army (before Vietnam), which went "I don't know but I've been told."

I have attended a couple of community meetings in the past week to hear all about how a number of our neighbors of Sagaponack, Bridgehampton and Watermill have decided to pull an Atlas Shrugged and tell the Town of Southampton the heck with you... we are leaving your town and gonna do what we want in our own village. Now, while I am not part of their group, I have had my own problems with this town and in many ways can sympathize with this group. And, I do subscribe to much of what is put forth in Atlas Shrugged. But I think they may be running off too fast without considering all the consequences to all of us.

Anyway, to begin: The first thing they did was to carefully draw a very crooked line from Watermill to Sagaponack encompassing the entire waterfront and then including many second and third level back from the waterfront properties to include enough "voters." One of the few things I remember from high school history is the very interesting and amusing word "gerrymander." I seem to remember that the designing of a district to control the voting process was called a gerrymander and turned out to be less than legal. Anyway, I never dreamed that one-day I would actually be faced with a gerrymander that might have an effect on my life and property. Well, here it is. Now I have spoken to quite a number of people in the gerrymandered place called Dune Hampton. A lot of those both in the first, second and third tiers did not even know anything about what a few activists had in store for them. And most that I heard from did not want any part of this thing. They did not want to live anywhere but in the 350 year old historic hamlet in which they bought their houses.

Now I don't know but I've been told... contrary to what others have been told, all real estate taxes will increase if this new village happens. The people in it will be very few and they will have to pay for all the services a much larger population would normally split. Of course, the people on the waterfront who have some of the most expensive houses in the country and do pay a big part of the local taxes will not really even notice the increase, but those second and third tier folks are going to have a major surprise, regardless of what some have been told. It also seems obvious that the homeowners in the traditional now landlocked communities will also have to make up the difference lost when all those really valuable houses leave the local tax rolls.

One of the sales pitches being put to the prospective Dune Hamptoners is that they will be able to establish their own zoning and building codes, and control the roads and parking areas of our beaches. Remember... all the beaches belong to all of us. The problem is that if you can't park or have to pay too much to park and you live in Sag Harbor for instance, you will have a hard time visiting your beach.

I don't know but I've been told that this is not necessarily going to be true. A Village is still part of the Town, which is part of the County, which is part of the State, which is part of the USA. All those bigger guys have a bunch of rules and laws, which I've heard, will be hard or impossible to contravene. But those second and third tier folks may be misinformed and bamboozled. If those guys up front can build bigger and higher houses and/or move them back ten feet from their property lines they will surely be in the faces of those second level people, and will probably devalue the smaller guys properties. As to the hardening of the dunes issue...the Dongan Patent trustees will have lots to say about that as well.

Now this is confusing, but I've been told that they need 500 residents or occupants to have a village. They also have to have 20% of the qualified and registered voters to sign a petition to the town to set this thing up for a vote. And ultimately if only a few actually show up for this vote when it happens, nine people out of seventeen would make this happen while all those other folks are caught napping. Here is the problem. I'll bet that there weren't fifty qualified and registered voters in this district at the last elections – if that! Why is that? Well it is simple. Most people are registered and pay income taxes where they really live. Lots of the folks on the dunes live on dividend, interest, and other unearned income, which is just fine and fortunate. But if they were registered in Southampton and owned major homes here, the great State of New York would have some very good reasons to say "Hey, we want a piece of all that much needed money." A few of these people do live in NYC or Westchester, etc. and do pay New York State taxes, but I'll bet most call Palm Beach, Bergen County, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island home. Or, even places with little or no taxes. How many do you actually think were registered here? Here is the scoop: I don't really know but I've been told that when the paid canvassers went around to try to get the 100 or so signatures for the petition which was filed with the town July 3, they had change of residence forms for those people to sign... to get enough voters.

Now the town has about thirty days to challenge these signatures and see if they are all valid and individually witnessed. I think one of the first things that they should do is submit the same 127 names to the New York State income taxing authorities to see if the state agrees that these people are indeed residents and are paying their fair share of taxes. Again... I don't know but I've been told they could switch back to their real addresses after this vote. I am not a lawyer (never wanted to be) but I'd love to know if the foregoing could be considered fraud! (You know... switching residences to influence a single vote.)

There is a lot more to research and discuss, but I think it is important that I don't bore you with too long an introduction to this situation. Let's hope that all involved on all sides hire really good and honest lawyers to do the legal legwork and advise their clients responsibly. This means the Dune Hamptoners, the town, the community members and all others concerned.
